Notes on contributors

Fidelma Ashe is Lecturer in Politics in the School of Economics and Politics, the University of Ulster at Jordanstown. She has written widely on issues of gender in Northern Ireland and is the author of The New Politics of Masculinity: Men, Power and Resistance (Routledge, 2007).

Alan Bairner is Professor of Sport and Social Theory in the School of Sport and Exercise Sciences, Loughborough University. He is the author of Sport, Nationalism and Globalization: European and North American Perspectives (SUNY Press, 2001) and the editor of Sport and the Irish: Histories, Identities, Issues (UCD Press, 2004).

Stephen Baker is Lecturer in Film and Television Studies in the School of Media, Film and Journalism, the University of Ulster at Coleraine. He has published widely on media representations of the conflict in Northern Ireland.

Sean Campbell is Senior Lecturer in the Department of English and Media at Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge. He is the co-author (with Gerry Smyth) of Beautiful Day: Forty Years of Irish Rock (Cork University Press, 2005) and the author of a forthcoming study of second-generation Irish musicians in Britain.

Andreas Cebulla is Research Director at the National Centre for Social Research, London. He has published widely on economic and regeneration policy in Northern Ireland and is the co-author (with David Greenberg, Karl Ashworth, and Robert Walker) of Welfare to Work: New Labour and the US Experience (Ashgate, 2005).

Paul Connolly is Professor in the School of Education, Queen's University, Belfast. He has published extensively on issues of race and racism in Britain and Northern Ireland and is co-author (with Alan Smith & Berni Kelly) of Too Young to Notice? The Cultural and Political Awareness of 3–6 Year Olds in Northern Ireland (2002, Belfast: Community Relations Council).

Colin Coulter is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Sociology, the National University of Ireland, Maynooth. He is the author of Contemporary Northern Irish Society: An Introduction (Pluto, 1999).

Geraint Ellis is Senior Lecturer in the School of Planning, Architecture and Civil Engineering, Queen's University, Belfast. He has written widely on issues of spatial planning and sustainable development in a Northern Irish context.

Romana Khaoury is completing a doctorate in the School of Sociology, Social Policy & Social Work, Queen's University, Belfast. Her research is focused upon the experience of ethnic minorities in Northern Irish schools.

Patricia Lundy is Senior Lecturer in the School of Sociology and Applied Social Sciences, the University of Ulster at Jordanstown. She has published widely on issues of victimhood and memory in Northern Ireland and is the co-author (with Mark McGovern) of Ardayne: The Untold Truth (Beyond the Pale, 2002).

Claire Mitchell is Senior Lecturer in Sociology in the School of Sociology, Social Policy & Social Work, Queen's University, Belfast. She has written widely on religious and political identities in Northern Ireland and is the author of Religion, Identity and Politics in Northern Ireland: Boundaries of Belonging and Belief (Ashgate, 2005).

Michael Murray is Lecturer in Sociology in the Department of Adult and Community Education, the National University of Ireland, Maynooth. He has written extensively on the politics of waste management on both sides of the Irish border.

Mark McGovern is Reader in Social Sciences at Edge Hill University. He has published widely on issues of victimhood and memory in Northern Ireland and is the co-author (with Patricia Lundy) of Ardayne: The Untold Truth (Beyond the Pale, 2002).

Greg McLaughlin is Senior Lecturer in Media Studies in the School of Media, Film & Journalism, the University of Ulster at Coleraine. He is the author of The War Correspondent (Pluto, 2002).

William J. V. Neill is Professor of Spatial Planning in the Department of Geography and Environment, the University of Aberdeen. He has written extensively on urban change. His publications include Urban Planning and Cultural Identity (Routledge, 2003).

Mary O'Rawe is Senior Lecturer in the Transitional Justice Institute, the University of Ulster at Jordanstown. She has written widely on issues of policing and human rights in a Northern Irish context and is the co-author with Linda Moore of Human Rights on Duty—Principles for Better Policing: International Lessons for Northern Ireland (Belfast: Committee for the Administration of Justice, 1997).

Peter Shirlow is Senior Lecturer in the School of Law, Queen's University, Belfast. He is the co-author (with Brendan Murtagh) of Belfast: Segregation, Violence and the City and the co-author (with Kieran McEvoy) of Beyond the Wire: Former Prisoners and Conflict Transformation in Northern Ireland (Pluto, 2008).

Gerry Smyth is Reader in Cultural History in the department of English at Liverpool John Moores University. Among his books is Noisy Island: A Short History of Irish Popular Music (Cork University Press, 2005).

Jim Smyth is Lecturer in Sociology in the School of Sociology, Social Policy & Social Work, Queen's University, Belfast. He has written widely about issues of political economy in Northern Ireland and is the co-author (with Graham Ellison) of The Crowned Harp: Policing Northern Ireland (Pluto, 1999).

Jonathan Tonge is Professor of Politics in the School of Politics and Communications Studies, the University of Liverpool. He has written extensively about Northern Irish political life and is the author of Northern Ireland (Polity, 2006).