List of contributors

Lez Cooke is Research Associate in Television Drama at Manchester Metropolitan University. He is the author of British Television Drama: A History (BFI, 2003) and Troy Kennedy Martin (Manchester University Press, 2007).

Kay Dickinson is a lecturer in Media and Communications at Goldsmiths College, University of London. She is the author of Off Key: When Film and Music Won't Work Together (Oxford University Press, 2008) and the editor of Movie Music: The Film Reader (Routledge, 2002) and with Glyn Davis, Teen TV: Genre, Consumption and Identity (BFI, 2003).

K.J. Donnelly is Reader in Film at the University of Southampton. He is the author of British Film Music and Film Musicals (2007), The Spectre of Sound (2005), Pop Music in British Cinema (2001) and edited Film Music: Critical Approaches (2001).

John Ellis is Professor of Media Arts at Royal Holloway University of London. His books include Visible Fictions (1982), Seeing Things (2000) and TV FAQ (2007), and he has written widely on both television and cinema for journals including Screen and Media, Culture and Society. Between 1982 and 1999 he ran the independent TV production company Large Door, making programmes on cinema, popular culture and food including Angela Carter's Holy Family Album and the award-winning This Food Business. His research into the history and forms of TV has produced the AHRC funded database of ITV programmes 1955-85 (TVTiP at the BUFVC website), and from 2006 he joined the EU funded Video Active project aiming to make available online items from historic European TV.

John Hill is Professor of Media at Royal Holloway, University of London. He is the author of Sex, Class and Realism: British Cinema 1956-63 (1986), British Cinema in the 1980s (1999), and Cinema and Northern Ireland: Film, Culture and Politics (2006) and co-editor of The Oxford Guide to Film Studies (1998).

Brett Mills is a lecturer in Film and Television Studies at the University of East Anglia. He is the author of Television Sitcom (BFI: 2005) and co-author with David Barlow of Reading Media Theory (Pearson: forthcoming). He has just completed the AHRC-funded research project, 'Funny Business: Interviews with Members of the British Terrestrial Television Comedy Industry'.

Laura Mulvey is Professor of Film and Media Studies at Birbeck College, University of London. Her books include Visual and Other Pleasures (Macmillan, 1989), Fetishism and Curiosity (BFI, 1996) and Death 24x a Second: Stillness and the Moving Image (Reaktion, 2005).

Catrin Prys was a lecturer at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth, teaching through the medium of English and Welsh. She had published on British television drama and had extensively researched the work of Dennis Potter. Her other main research interests revolved around Welsh and European Theatre. She unfortunately passed away in October 2006 and will be sadly missed by all her family, friends and colleagues. This book is dedicated to her memory.

Al Rees is a Research Fellow in the Department of Communication, Art and Design at the Royal College of Art. He is the author of A History of Experimental Film and Video (BFI, 1999) and Fields of View (BFI, forthcoming).

Jamie Sexton is a lecturer in Film and Media at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth. He is the author of Alternative Film Culture in Inter-War Britain (Exeter University Press, forthcoming) and editor of Music, Sound and Multimedia: From the Live to the Virtual (Edinburgh University Press, 2007).

Helen Wheatley is Lecturer in Film and Television Studies at the University of Warwick. She has published a range of work on popular genres in television drama in the UK, US and beyond, and is the author of Gothic Television (Manchester University Press, 2006). She has also published work on lifestyle television and natural history programming and has ongoing research interests in television historiography, and the idea of 'television for women'. She is currently beginning work on a book on the nature of spectacle and visual pleasure on television.