Notes on contributors

Angus Brown is Stipendiary Lecturer in English at St Anne's College, Oxford. He is currently writing a monograph on the style of close reading in the Anglo-American university.

Robert L. Caserio is Professor of English and Comparative Literature at Pennsylvania State University. He is co-editor of The Cambridge History of the English Novel (Cambridge University Press, 2012) and editor of The Cambridge Companion to the Twentieth-Century English Novel (Cambridge University Press, 2009). He is at work on The Cambridge Introduction to British Fiction, 1900–1950 (Cambridge University Press).

Denis Flannery is Senior Lecturer in American and English Literature at the University of Leeds. His published writings include his first monograph, Henry James: A Certain Illusion (Ashgate, 2000), and On Sibling Love, Queer Attachment and American Writing (Ashgate, 2007). Currently he is working on a new study of Henry James's relationship to Ireland, while completing a collaborative memoir begun with his father, Denis Kevin Flannery (1919–2009). He has also begun a major research project on the Dutch theatre company Toneelgroep, Amsterdam.

Geoff Gilbert is Associate Professor of Comparative Literature and English at the American University of Paris. He is the author of Before Modernism Was: Modern History and the Constituency of Writing (Palgrave Macmillan, 2005). He is currently working on translation, capital, the semantic, and audible distance in contemporary realist writing.

Hermione Lee has written biographies of Virginia Woolf, Edith Wharton and Penelope Fitzgerald, and is President of Wolfson College, Oxford.

John McLeod is Professor of Postcolonial and Diaspora Literatures at the School of English, University of Leeds. He is the author of Life Lines: Writing Transcultural Adoption (Bloomsbury, 2015), J. G. Farrell (Northcote House, 2007), Postcolonial London: Rewriting the Metropolis (Routledge, 2004) and, as co-editor, The Revision of Englishness (Manchester University Press, 2004).

Michèle Mendelssohn is Associate Professor of English Literature at Mansfield College, Oxford, and Deputy Director of the Rothermere American Institute. She is the author of Henry James, Oscar Wilde and Aesthetic Culture (Edinburgh University Press, 2007) and a co-editor of Oxford 21st-Century Approaches to Literature: Late Victorian into Modern, 1880–1920 (with Laura Marcus and Kirsten Shepherd-Barr, Oxford University Press, 2016). She is writing a biography of Oscar Wilde.

Kaye Mitchell is Senior Lecturer in Contemporary Literature at the University of Manchester. She is the author of A. L. Kennedy: New British Fiction (Palgrave, 2007), Intention and Text: Towards an Intentionality of Literary Form (Continuum, 2008) and the editor of Sarah Waters: Contemporary Critical Perspectives (Bloomsbury, 2013). Her current research includes a monograph on shame, gender and contemporary literature and an edited Companion to Women's Experimental Literature, 1900–Present (Edinburgh University Press, 2017).

Bernard O'Donoghue was born in Cullen, County Cork in 1945. Since 1965 he has lived in Oxford, where he taught medieval literature at Magdalen and Wadham Colleges. He has published seven volumes of poems, of which the most recent was Farmers Cross (Faber and Faber, 2011).

Alan O'Leary is Associate Professor in Italian and Director of Research and Innovation in the School of Languages, Cultures and Societies at the University of Leeds. He has published several books on Italian cinema. He co-founded the annual Film Issue of The Italianist. His current projects include Italian Cinemas/Italian Histories and two monographs – one on film and history in Italy (for Donzelli), and another on the 1966 film The Battle of Algiers (for Mimesis).

Julie Rivkin, Professor of English at Connecticut College, is the author of False Positions: The Representational Logics of Henry James's Fiction (Stanford University Press, 1996) and co-editor (with Michael Ryan) of Literary Theory: An Anthology (Blackwell, 1998, 2004). She has also written about Henry James and his afterlives, and is editing What Maisie

Knew for The Complete Fiction of Henry James (Cambridge University Press). Her other current project is on Canadian short-story writer Alice Munro.

Joseph Ronan teaches English Literature at the University of Brighton and the University of Sussex. He received his PhD in Sexual Dissidence in Literature and Culture from the University of Sussex in 2015. His research focuses primarily on bisexuality in contemporary literature, popular culture and queer theory. His current project explores narratives of sexuality, adolescence and futurity in literary representations of punk.