Notes on contributors

Agnes Andeweg is a lecturer at the Centre for Gender and Diversity of Maastricht University (Netherlands) and a former postdoc at Radboud University Nijmegen. Her dissertation on the Gothic in Dutch contemporary literature was published by Amsterdam University Press in 2011 (Griezelig gewoon. Gotieke verschijningen in Dutch novels 1980–1995). She has published numerous articles on gothic, gender and Dutch literature, and contributed to Blackwell's Encyclopedia of the Gothic. Her current research focuses on the role of writers and their works in shaping the Dutch national self-image as sexually liberated.

Rosemarie Buikema is professor of Art, Culture and Diversity at Utrecht University. She is the chair of the UU Genderstudies Department and academic director of the Netherlands Research School of Genderstudies. She has widely published on feminist and post-colonial cultural theory and is currently working on the role of the arts in the context of political transitions. Among her recent publications are Doing Gender in Media, Art and Culture (Routledge, 2009) and Theories and Methodologies in Feminist Postgraduate Research (Routledge, 2011).

Ranita Chatterjee is Associate Professor and Graduate Director of English at California State University, Northridge. She has published numerous articles on queer Gothic, teaching the Gothic, and 1790s British Jacobin writers for journals such as Gothic Studies and European Romantic Review. Ranita has also contributed entries on feminist and psychoanalytic theorists for Blackwell's

2011 The Encyclopedia of Literary and Cultural Theory, and two lengthy entries on William Godwin and Children's Literature for the 2012 Blackwell Encyclopedia of Romanticism. She is working on a book on the literary politics of Godwin and radical women writers of the 1790s.

Kamilla Elliott is a senior lecturer in the Department of English and Creative Writing at Lancaster University. She is author of Rethinking the Novel/Film Debate (Cambridge University Press, 2003) and Portraiture and British Gothic Fiction: The Rise of Picture Identification, 1764–1835 (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2012), as well as various articles and essays on literature and visual media.

Ardel Haefele-Thomas was awarded her PhD in Modern Thought and Literature from Stanford University. She is currently the chair of LGBT Studies at City College of San Francisco. Her book Queer Others in Victorian Gothic: Transgressing Monstrosity was recently published by the University of Wales Press.

William Hughes is Professor of Gothic Studies at Bath Spa University, and the founder-editor of Gothic Studies, the refereed journal of the International Gothic Association. His fifteen published books include scholarly editions of Bram Stoker's Dracula (2007) and The Lady of the Shroud (2001), and two recent student guides to the criticism and content of Dracula (2008, 2009). With Andrew Smith he has coedited Bram Stoker: History, Psychoanalysis and the Gothic (1998), Empire and the Gothic (2003), Queering the Gothic (2009), The Victorian Gothic: An Edinburgh Companion (2012) and the forthcoming EcoGothic.

Bernice M. Murphy is an Assistant Professor and Lecturer in Popular Literature at the School of English, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland. She has edited the collection Shirley Jackson: Essays on the Literary Legacy (McFarland, 2005) coedited It Came From the 1950s: Popular Culture, Popular Anxieties (Palgrave Macmillan, 2011,) and written the monograph The Suburban Gothic in American Popular Culture (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009). She is co-founder of the online Irish Journal of Horror and Gothic Studies and is working on a book about the relationship between horror and the wilderness/rural landscape in American popular culture.

Anne Quéma teaches theories of criticism and modern British fiction and poetry at Acadia University (Wolfville, Nova Scotia). She has published The Agon of Modernism: Wyndham Lewis's Allegories, Aesthetics, and Politics as well as articles in Gothic Studies, Contemporary Issues in Law, English Studies in Canada, Contemporary Literary Criticism, The Canadian Modernists Meet, Philosophy and Literature, West Coast Line, Wider Boundaries of Daring: The Modernist Impulse in Canadian Women's Poetry, and the International Journal of Law in Context. Currently her work focuses on discourses of power in jurisprudence, contemporary Gothic fiction, and family law.

Johannes Schlegel teaches English Literature and Culture at the Georg-August University Göttingen. He is currently completing his PhD thesis on Anthropology and Mediality of Evil in British Romanticism. His research interests focus on Romanticism, literary and cultural theory, Gothic and horror studies and contemporary popular culture and its media.

John Sears is a Reader in Contemporary Literature at Manchester Metropolitan University, and author of Stephen King's Gothic (2011) and Reading George Szirtes (2008).

Joanne Watkiss is a lecturer in English Literature at Leeds Metropolitan University. Her research focuses on the interplay between contemporary gothic texts and literary theory, in particular the later works of Jacques Derrida. In 2012 her monograph Gothic Contemporaries: The Haunted Text was published by the University of Wales Press as part of the Gothic Literary Studies series.

Elisabeth Wesseling is the director of the Centre for Gender and Diversity, a research centre of the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences of Maastricht University, the Netherlands. She publishes on the cultural construction of childhood in fiction (film, (children's) literature, photography) and science (developmental psychology, anthropology). More specifically, she works on the cultural construction of the adoptable child in transnational adoption from a comparative perspective, studying narrative strategies for the 'kinning' of foreigners in the United States, France and the Netherlands. Her work has been published in journals such as Arcadia, Science in Context, and Children's Literature in Education. She co-authored a monograph with Rosemarie Buikema on Dutch Gothic fiction by Amsterdam University Press.

Sue Zlosnik is Professor of Gothic Literature at the Manchester Metropolitan University, UK. With Avril Horner, she has published five books, including Daphne du Maurier: Writing, Identity and the Gothic Imagination (1998), Gothic and the Comic Turn (2005), the edited collection Le Gothic: Influences and Appropriations in Europe and America (2008) (all Palgrave Macmillan) and an edition of Eaton Stannard Barrett's The Heroine (Valancourt, 2011). Alone, she has published essays on Meredith, Stevenson, Tolkien and Palahniuk. Her most recent book is Patrick McGrath (University of Wales Press, 2011). She has contributed an essay to the forthcoming collection Global Gothic edited by Glennis Byron (Manchester University Press). She is currently working on invited contributions to the new Cambridge Companion to Modern Gothic and the Palgrave History of British Women's Fiction.