Notes on contributors

Adrian Barlow was formerly Director of Public Programmes and Lecturer in English at the University of Cambridge Institute of Continuing Education. Now President of the English Association, his publications include The Great War in British Literature (2000), World and Time: Teaching Literature in Context (2009) and Extramural: Literature and Lifelong Learning (2012).

Andrew Frayn teaches at the University of Manchester. He is currently completing a monograph, Writing Disenchantment: British First World War Prose, 1914–1930, and has published on Richard Aldington and Ford Madox Ford. He is secretary to the Ford Madox Ford Society and editor of the New Canterbury Literary Society (Richard Aldington) Newsletter.

Max Haberich completed his PhD at Clare Hall, University of Cambridge, working in the Department of German on Arthur Schnitzler's and Jakob Wassermann's sense of German-Jewish identity. He has articles on Schnitzler in the journals Central Europe (2012) and Journal of Austrian Studies (2013).

After a career in literary journalism, publishing and broadcasting, Alison Hennegan has returned to the academic world and is a Fellow of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. Recent publications include “‘Fit for Heroes’: Bliss, Britten and Requiems’, First World War Studies, 2, 2 (2011) and ‘A Sermon for Remembrance Sunday’, Theology (November 2012).

Klaus Hofmann is a retired professor of English Literature at the Goethe University, Frankfurt. Recent publications include articles on literary aesthetics, Keats, Adorno, Döblin and Malthus.

Kate Kennedy has a PhD from Clare Hall, Cambridge and is a Research Fellow at Girton College, Cambridge. She works on the relationship between music and literature and has published articles on Ivor Gurney, A. E. Housman and Benjamin Britten. She has co-edited special issues of the Ivor Gurney Journal (2007) and First World War Studies (2011) on music and literature of the First World War. She is currently completing a biography of Ivor Gurney.

John Pegum wrote his PhD thesis at the University of Cambridge on the associations between the geography of the Western Front and the identity of the soldier during and after the First World War. He is now Senior Product Manager for Literature and the Arts at ProQuest where he is responsible for a portfolio of online resources including Literature Online (LION).

Jane Potter is Senior Lecturer in Publishing at the Oxford International Centre for Publishing Studies, Oxford Brookes University. Her publications include Boys in Khaki, Girls in Print: Women's Literary Responses to the Great War 1914–1918 (2005), an edition of the First World War novel Good Old Anna by Marie Belloc Lowndes (2011) and Three Poets of the First World War: Ivor Gurney, Isaac Rosenberg and Wilfred Owen with Jon Stallworthy (2011). Her current project, with Carol Acton, is on trauma and resilience in medical personnel working in war zones.

Claudia Siebrecht is Lecturer in Modern European History at the University of Sussex. She works on the cultural history of war and her first book is The Aesthetics of Loss: German Women's Art of the First World War (2013).

After a career teaching in secondary schools, George Simmers wrote a PhD thesis at Oxford Brookes University on the prose literature of the First World War. Since 2006 his blog, Great War Fiction, has commented on many aspects of the war and its legacy. He has published papers on Kipling, Bennett, Eliot and others, and a monograph on 'Honeysuckle Cottage', a story by P. G. Wodehouse. He is currently working on Great War Fictions, a survey of writing about the First World War from 1914 to the present.

Trudi Tate is a Fellow of Clare Hall and an Affiliated Lecturer in the Faculty of English, Cambridge. Her books include Modernism, History and the First World War (1998, rpt 2013), Women's Fiction and the Great War (1997; edited with Suzanne Raitt), and an edition of Ruby M. Ayres' novel, Richard Chatterton, V.C. (2011), as well as essays on the Charge of the Light Brigade and on Australian, American and Vietnamese memoirs of the American/Viet Nam War. She has co-edited special issues of the Ivor Gurney Journal (2007) and First World War Studies (2011) on music and literature of the First World War.

Peter Tregear is Professor and Head of the Australian National University School of Music in Canberra. He has published widely on music in the Weimar republic and Australian music history, and has conducted numerous first performances and modern revivals of this repertoire. A study of Ernst Krenek's operas from the 1920s (Ernst Krenek and the Politics of Musical Style) is forthcoming from Scarecrow Press.

Michael Walsh is Associate Chair (Research) at the School of Art, Design and Media at Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. He has written several books on C. R. W. Nevinson, including This Cult of Violence (2002). He has edited several books investigating the relationship between Modernism and the First World War, the most recent being London, Modernism and 1914 (2010). He is currently working on a monograph of Eric Bogle's songs/poems.

Alexander Watson held a Marie Curie Intra-European Fellowship at Warsaw University, Poland. He completed his doctorate at Oxford University in 2005 and then held Research and British Academy Postdoctoral Fellowships at Clare Hall, University of Cambridge. His first book, Enduring the Great War: Combat, Morale and Collapse in the German and British Armies, 1914–1918 (2008), was awarded the Institute of Contemporary History and Wiener Library's Fraenkel Prize. He is now a Lecturer in History at Goldsmiths University of London.