Notes on contributors

Francis J. Bremer is Professor Emeritus of History at Millersville University. He has published widely on all aspects of early modern British Atlantic and New England history. His most recent works include Building a New Jerusalem: John Davenport, a puritan in three worlds (2012) and Lay empowerment and the development of puritanism (2015).

Tim Cooper is Associate Professor of Church History at the University of Otago. He is a co-editor of the forthcoming five-volume critical edition of Richard Baxter's Reliquiae Baxterianae (Oxford University Press, 2020). Professor Cooper is the author of Fear and polemic in seventeenth-century England: Richard Baxter and antinomianism (2001) and John Owen, Richard Baxter and the formation of nonconformity (2011) as well as numerous articles on seventeenth-century church history.

Chad Van Dixhoorn is Professor of Church History and the Director of the Craig Center for the Study of the Westminster Standards at Westminster Theological Seminary. He is the principal editor of five-volume The minutes and papers of the Westminster assembly, 1643–1652 (2012). His other works include Confessing the faith: a reader's guide to the Westminster confession of faith (2014) and God's ambassadors: the Westminster assembly and the reformation of the English pulpit, 1643–1653 (2017).

Benjamin M. Guyer is a lecturer in the Department of History and Philosophy at the University of Tennessee at Martin. He is the author of several essays and articles on the early modern Church of England. Most recently, he is co-editor with Paul Avis of The Lambeth Conference: theology, history, polity, and purpose (2017).

Joel Halcomb is Lecturer in Early Modern History at the University of East Anglia. He was an assistant editor for The minutes and papers of the Westminster assembly, 1643–1653 (2012) and co-editor of volume three of The writing and speeches of Oliver Cromwell (2015). He is currently preparing a monograph on the congregational movement during the British civil wars.

James Mawdesley received his doctoral degree from the University of Sheffield in 2014. Dr Mawdesley has published a number of articles in various refereed journals. Since 2017, he has worked as the Research Development Officer for the Faculty of Health and Medicine at Lancaster University.

Hunter Powell is Research Fellow at the Clements Center for National Security at the University of Texas, Austin, and has also served as lecturer in history at the University of Texas. He is the author of The crisis of British protestantism: church power in the puritan revolution, 1638–1644 (2015).

Stephen K. Roberts is the Director of the History of Parliament, London, and specialises in the history of mid-seventeenth-century Britain, particularly in Wales and the west and south-west of England. He is the author of Recovery and restoration in an English county: Devon local administration 1649–1670 (1985) and a co-editor of Politics and people in revolutionary England (1986), together with many articles on England and Wales in the mid-seventeenth-century political crisis.

R. Scott Spurlock is Senior Lecturer in Scottish Religious Cultures at the University of Glasgow and is a Research Associate at the Faculty of Theology, University of Stellenbosch. He has numerous publications encompassing early modern history and theology with a focus on the development of religious traditions in Scotland and its international world. Dr Spurlock is the author of Cromwell and Scotland: conquest and religion, 1650–1660 (2007).

Elliot Vernon is the co-editor, with Philip Baker, of The agreements of the people, the Levellers and the constitutional crisis of the English revolution (2012) and is in the last stages of completing a monograph on London presbyterians and the politics of religion, c.1637–1664.

Sarah Ward Clavier is Senior Lecturer in History and Heritage at the University of the West of England, Bristol. She has published a number of articles, focusing on seventeenth-century Wales, and is currently preparing for publication a monograph on the subject of Royalism, religion, and revolution: the gentry of north-east Wales, 1640–1688.