List of contributors

Jean-Pierre Cavaillé is Senior Lecturer in History and Anthropology at École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales in Toulouse. His interests include the cultural, intellectual and social history of early modern Europe as well as the history of early modern philosophy. He is a member of various European research groups and scholarly networks. He has published books, edited volumes and articles on seventeenth-century libertinism and religious dissent.

Laurent Curelly is Senior Lecturer in British Studies at Université de Haute Alsace in Mulhouse. He specialises in seventeenth-century history, politics and literature. He wrote his PhD on tears and weeping in the poetry of Crashaw, Donne, Herbert, Southwell and Vaughan. In addition to the Metaphysical poets, his interests include Civil War radicalism, early modern print culture and cultural transfers between the British Isles and the European continent. He has written widely on Civil War journalism and sectarian radicalism and contributed essays to scholarly reviews as well as chapters to edited volumes on these topics. He has published a translation into French of the editorials of the radical newsbook The Moderate (2011). He is currently working on a monograph in English on The Moderate.

Rémy Duthille is Senior Lecturer in British Studies at Université Bordeaux Montaigne. He wrote his PhD on the patriotism of British radicals in the twenty years preceding the French Revolution, and has published various articles on Richard Price. He is now broadening the scope of his research on political discourse, including toasting, in the long eighteenth century.

Catie Gill is Lecturer in Early Modern Writing in the Department of English and Drama, School of the Arts, Loughborough University. She has published on Quakerism, and specifically on the collective values of the movement with respect to gender. Her second book was an edited collection: Theatre and Culture: From Leviathan to the Licensing Act. She is currently working on William Chillingworth's religious rationalism.

Marion Leclair is an École Normale Supérieure graduate and a doctoral student at Université Paris 3 Sorbonne Nouvelle. She specialises in the English radical novel. She has published a translation into French of A Dream of John Ball by William Morris.

Carine Lounissi is Senior Lecturer in American Studies at Université de Rouen and a member of the LARCA research group at Université Paris Diderot. She wrote her PhD on Paine's political thought. She published it in November 2012 as La Pensée politique de Thomas Paine en contexte: théorie et pratique. Her research focuses on the history of political ideas, the American Revolution, republicanism and political language.

Patrick Müller, PhD in British Studies, is a teacher of English for the German Federal Office of Languages. His doctoral thesis Latitudinarianism and Didacticism was published in 2009. He organised a symposium on the social and political impact of the first and third Earls of Shaftesbury at the Ashley-Cooper's family seat, St Giles's House, Dorset, in 2015. He has lectured and published widely on Shaftesbury, other issues related to the eighteenth century and on contemporary British and American literature.

Jason Peacey is Professor of Early Modern British History at UCL. He edited The Regicides and the Execution of Charles I (2001) and The Print Culture of Parliament, 1600–1800 (2007), co-edited Parliament at Work (2002), and is the author of Politicians and Pamphleteers. Propaganda in the Civil Wars and Interregnum (2004) and Print and Public Politics in the English Revolution

(2013). Recent articles include 'Print, publicity and popularity: the projecting of Sir Balthazar Gerbier, 1640–1662', Journal of British Studies (2012) and 'Sir Edward Dering, popularity and the public, 1640–1644', Historical Journal (2011). He is currently working on a project relating to overlapping and interlocking publics in seventeenth-century Europe.

Nigel Smith is William and Annie S. Paton Foundation Professor of Ancient and Modern Literature at Princeton University. He has published mostly on early modern literature, especially the seventeenth century; his work is interdisciplinary by inclination and training. He has edited the Longman Annotated English Poets edition of Andrew Marvell's Poems (2003, pbk 2007), is the author of Andrew Marvell: The Chameleon (Yale University Press, 2010; pbk 2012), and many articles on Marvell. His other major works are Is Milton better than Shakespeare? (2008), Literature and Revolution in England, 1640–1660 (1994) and Perfection Proclaimed: Language and Literature in English Radical Religion 1640–1660 (1989). He has also edited the Journal of George Fox (1998), and the Ranter Pamphlets (1983; revised edn. 2014), and co-edited with Nicholas McDowell the Oxford Handbook to Milton (Oxford University Press, 2009, pbk 2011). A new book concerned with the state and literary production in early modern Europe is forthcoming, and he has co-edited a forthcoming collection with Jan Bloemendal, Politics and Aesthetics in European Baroque Tragedy (Brill, 2016).

Nick Treuherz is Lecturer at the University of Liverpool. His PhD thesis examined the writings of French materialists Diderot, La Mettrie, Helvétius and d'Holbach, and more particularly their diffusion and impact on the German Enlightenment.

Ted Vallance is Professor in Early Modern British Political Culture at the University of Roehampton and has previously taught at the universities of Sheffield, Manchester and Liverpool. He is the author of A Radical History of Britain (Little, Brown and Co., 2009), The Glorious Revolution (Little, Brown and Co., 2006) and Revolutionary England and the National Covenant (Boydell, 2005). With Harald Braun he has edited two volumes on conscience and casuistry in early modern Europe: Contexts of Conscience (Palgrave, 2004) and The Renaissance Conscience (Wiley Blackwell, 2011).

LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

His articles have featured in Albion, English Historical Review, Historical Journal, Historical Research, History Workshop Journal, The Huntington Library Quarterly, Journal of British Studies, Renaissance Studies and The Seventeenth Century.

Catherine Vigier is Senior Lecturer in British Studies at Université de Rouen. She specialises in British captivity narratives from the Mediterranean on which she has published various articles.