Notes on contributors

Paul Bloomfield works at Anglia Ruskin University for the Faculty of Arts, Law and Social Sciences and is part of the Labour History Research Unit. Paul is currently completing a PhD thesis entitled ‘The Breakaway of the Social Democratic Party between 1979 and 1982 in the Context of Post-war Labour Party History’.

Robin Bunce is a historian based at Homerton College, University of Cambridge, where he supervises work on the history of ideas. His monograph Thomas Hobbes was published by Continuum in 2009. Subsequently he has worked on black power as an ideology and a movement in Britain. His most recent book, written with Paul Field, Renegade: The Life and Times of Darcus Howe, is published by Bloomsbury in 2017.

John Callaghan is Professor of Politics and Contemporary History at the University of Salford. He is the author of Socialism in Britain Since 1884 (1990), The Retreat of Social Democracy (2000) and Labour and Foreign Policy: A History (2007).

Richard Carr is a Senior Lecturer in History and Politics at Anglia Ruskin University. He has recently published a political biography of Charlie Chaplin with Routledge, and has written widely on interwar British conservatism, including a monograph Veteran MPs and Conservative Politics in the Aftermath of the Great War: The Memory of All That (2013). He co-authored Alice in Westminster: The Political Life of Alice Bacon with Rachel Reeves MP – which was named as one of the Guardian’s Political Books of 2016.

Jonathan Davis is Senior Lecturer in Russian History and co-Director of the Labour History Research Unit at Anglia Ruskin University. He is co-editor with Paul Corthorn of The Labour Party and the Wider World (2008), and with John Shepherd and Chris Wrigley of Britain's Second Labour Government, 1929–1931: A Reappraisal (2011). He is the author of Stalin: From Grey Blur to Great Terror (2008), and has published articles on delegates' visits to the Soviet Union in the 1920s in Revolutionary Russia, on the influence of the Russian Revolutions on Labour's ideology in Scottish Labour History, and on Labour's contemporary political thought in Renewal. He is currently writing a global history of the 1980s for Routledge.

Martin Farr is Senior Lecturer in Contemporary British History at Newcastle University. He has published on political biography, government and Parliament before, during and after the First World War, the politics of strategic bombing in the Second World War, seaside resorts and declinism, and package holidays in the 1970s. He is currently writing a book entitled Margaret Thatcher's World, and articles on imperial tropes in 1960s Britain, the film version of Oh! What a Lovely War, the deaths of Hugh Gaitskell and John Smith, and the relationship of Barack Obama and David Cameron.

Maroula (Mary) Joannou is Emerita Professor of Literary History and Women's Writing at Anglia Ruskin University. She is the author of Women's Writing, Englishness, and National and Cultural Identity: The Mobile Woman and the Migrant Voice, 1938–1962 (2012), Contemporary Women's Fiction: From The Golden Notebook to The Color Purple (2000), and 'Ladies Please Don't Smash These Windows': Women's Writing, Feminist Consciousness and Social Change 1918–1938 (1995). She is the editor of volume 8 of The Palgrave History of British Women's Writing (2012) and Women Writers of the 1930s, Gender, Politics and History (1998) and has published some forty book chapters and essays in peer-reviewed journals. In 1984 she was a member of both the St Albans Miners' Support Group and the Cambridge Miners' Support Group.

Rohan McWilliam is Professor of Modern British History at Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge and co-Director of the Labour History Research Unit. He is a former President of the British Association for Victorian Studies. His publications include Popular Politics in Nineteenth Century England (1998), The Tichborne Claimant: A Victorian Sensation (2007) and articles on Victorian melodrama, Elsa Lanchester, Jonathan Miller and G. W. M. Reynolds. He is currently at work on a history of the West End of London since 1800.

Neil Pye completed a PhD in History at the University of Huddersfield which was published as The Home Office and the Chartists, 1838–48: Protest and Repression in the West Riding of Yorkshire (2013). Currently, he is conducting research about Metro Mayors and Combined Authorities, plus independent research about Michael Heseltine's role as the minister for Liverpool during the 1980s. Outside of academia, Neil previously served as a borough councillor in West Lancashire during 2011–15 and chaired the West Lancashire Labour Group which in 2015 took control of the council.

Eric Shaw is Honorary Research Fellow in the Division of History and Politics at Stirling University. He is author of Discipline and Discord in the Labour Party (1988), The Labour Party since 1979 (1994), The Labour Party since 1945 (1996), Losing Labour's Soul: New Labour and the Blair Government 1997–2007 (2008) and, with Gerry Hassan, The Strange Death of Labour Scotland (2012).

Peter Tatchell is a human rights campaigner and Director of the Peter Tatchell Foundation: www.PeterTatchellFoundation.org.