Acknowledgements

This study is the culmination of ideas, questions and observations that have been growing on me in the course of the last decade, and it would be contrary to the participatory ethos to claim them as entirely my own, although no one other than myself can be held responsible for their limitations.

I am grateful to the International Research Centre 'Interweaving Performance Cultures' at the Freie Universität in Berlin for a fellowship in 2014–15, which permitted me to write the bulk of this study. I thank all the colleagues and scholars at the Centre as well as the 'Aesthetics of Applied Theatre' Research Programme team for stimulating discussions and for their encouragement. I acknowledge the sabbatical leave periods and infrastructural support provided by the Amsterdam School of Cultural Analysis, the Amsterdam Centre for Globalisation Studies, the Netherlands Institute for Cultural Analysis and the Faculty of Humanities of the University of Amsterdam during various stages of research. I am grateful for the sustained support from colleagues at the University of Amsterdam, particularly in the Theatre Studies Department. My very special gratitude to Veronika Zangl for her patient reading and helpful feedback.

I would like to express my sincere appreciation to friends and colleagues from around the world who have helped me with comments, literature and suggestions on various aspects of the study, as well as inviting me to present work in progress: Aristita Albacan, B. Ananthakrishnan, Antônio Araújo, Stephen Barber, Julian Boal, Milena Dragićević Šešić, Erika Fischer-Lichte, Mark Fleishman, Eva Fotiadi, Hjalmar Jorge Joffe-Eichhorn, Richard Gough, Yvette Hutchison, Torsten Jost, Edit Kaldor, Anuradha Kapur, Annina

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Klappert, Hanna Korsberg, Sara Matchett, Rabih Mroué, Hudita Mustafa, Nanako Nakajima, Helen Nicholson, Hannah Reich, Kati Röttger, Riku Saastamoinen, Ana Vujanovic, Matthias Warstat, Christel Weiler, the After-Performance Collective and the IFTR Feminist working group.

This study would not have been possible without the generosity and critical support of a number of artists and practitioners, whose work I deeply respect and hold in admiration. I thank Laia America Ribera Cañénguez and other members of Teatro Siluetas, Lina Issa, Aitana Cordero, Rebekka Reich, Oliver Gather, Radha Ramaswamy, Pilvi Takala, Walid Al-Alphy, Annette Krauss and Emily Schaeffer Omer-Man for help with sourcing documents and for their readiness to converse with me. Thanks also to all workshop participants and audience members who shared their personal experiences with me. Arjan Reinders' image of the small fish chasing the big fish aptly captures a participatory ethos for our times.

I am grateful to the peer reviewers at Manchester University Press, whose feedback on my first submission made me rewrite half the study, taking two more years in the process, pushing me to think through its core arguments with greater care.

I thank my parents Shri Devi and S. D. Bala, my aunt Lakshmi, my uncle, the late T. V. Subramanian, Ranganayaki (Paappakka), and my siblings Anand and Sharadha Smrithi for their unconditional affection and humour. Mona Chebbani, Rosemary Kikon, Shad Naved, John Ball, Niti Ranjan Biswas and Ambai have been extraordinarily uplifting friends and teachers. Esther Krop has provided the combination of love, support and unflattering honesty I could no longer imagine life without. Ilja has lightened and brightened life and taught me how one's own story is only ever told by weaving it into another's.

Parts of this study have been published in different earlier stages, although they have been revised substantially for this book: 'The Art of Unsolicited Participation' appeared in Tony Fisher and Eve Katsouraki (eds), Performing Antagonism: Theatre, Performance, and Radical Democracy (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2017), pp. 273–287; 'Applied Theatre und die Frage der Institutionskritik' appeared in Matthias Warstat et al. (eds), Applied Theatre: Rahmen und Positionen (Berlin: Theater der Zeit, 2017), pp. 274–288; 'Vectors of Participation in Theatre and Performance' appeared in Theatre Research International 3 (2012), pp. 236–248; 'What is the impact of theatre and performance?' appears in Maaïke Bleeker et al. (eds), Thinking Through Theatre: A Critical Companion to Performance (London: Bloomsbury Methuen Drama, forthcoming 2018); and 'Outside and Onstage: Experiences of the lesbian feminist theater collective Teatro Siluetas from Guatemala and El Salvador', an interview with Laia America Ribera Cañénguez, appeared in Ashley Tellis and Sruti Bala (eds), The Global Trajectories of Queerness: Re-thinking Same-Sex Politics in the Global South (Leiden: Brill/Rodopi, 2015) pp. 241–262. I acknowledge the kind permission of the publishers.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS