Notes on contributors

Dean Allbritton is an Assistant Professor of Spanish at Colby College, where he teaches courses on Spanish cinema and culture. His work analyses representations of illness and health in contemporary Spanish culture and media as focalising points for larger discourses of national and societal health. More broadly, he has interests in the fields of illness and disability studies, film theory, contemporary Spanish film, and cultural studies. He is currently working on a manuscript that explores the cultural history and legacy of HIV/AIDS in Spain. He has published articles in the Bulletin of Hispanic Studies, Journal of Spanish Cultural Studies, Hispanic Research Journal and in The Companion to Pedro Almodóvar (Wiley-Blackwell, 2013).

Carmen Ciller is a Lecturer of Film Studies at University Carlos III of Madrid. She has extensively published on interculturality, femininity and performance, and film production. Her most recent publications study the work of Argentinian actress Cecilia Roth.

Maria M. Delgado is Professor and Director of Research at Royal Central School of Speech and Drama University of London and an Honorary Fellow of the Institute for Modern Languages Research in the School of Advanced Study at the University of London. She has published extensively on Spanish-language performance and film and her work as a film curator and programmer includes work for the BFI and London Spanish Film Festival as well as a programme advisory role at the London Film Festival. She is a member of the Academia Europea.

Brad Epps is Professor of Spanish and Head of the Department of Spanish and Portuguese at the University of Cambridge. He was Professor of Romance Languages and Literatures and Professor and former Chair of the Committee on Degrees in Studies of Women, Gender and Sexuality at Harvard University for over two decades. He has published extensively on modern literature, film, art, architecture, urban theory, queer theory and immigration from Spain, Latin America, Hispanophone Africa and Catalonia, and is the author of Significant Violence: Oppression and Resistance in the Narratives of Juan Goytisolo (Oxford University Press, 2006); Spain Beyond Spain: Modernity, Literary History, and National Identity (with Luis Fernández Cifuentes, Bucknell University Press, 2005); Passing Lines: Immigration and Sexuality (with Bill Johnson-González and Keja Valens, Harvard University Press, 2005); All About Almodóvar: A Passion for Cinema (with Despina Kakoudaki, University of Minnesota Press, 2009); a special issue of Catalan Review on Barcelona and modernity (2004), and a special issue of GLQ (with Jonathan Katz) on lesbian theorist Monique Wittig (2007). His research interests include eighteenth- to twenty-first-century Spanish and Latin American literature, Catalan literature and film, Ibero-American cinema, photography and art, Hispanophone Africa, theories of visuality, modernity, critical theory, gender and sexuality studies, feminist thought, queer theory, urban cultures, immigration and post-colonial studies, among others.

Sally Faulkner is Professor of Hispanic Studies and Film Studies at the University of Exeter, where she is also Founder-Director of the Centre for Translating Cultures. She has published widely on Spanish film, literature and cultural studies, and is the author of Literary Adaptations in Spanish Cinema (Tamesis, 2004), A Cinema of Contradiction: Spanish Film in the 1960s (Edinburgh University Press, 2006) and A History of Spanish Film: Cinema and Society 1910–2010 (Bloomsbury Academic, 2013). In 2013 she was awarded the Philip Leverhulme Prize (Modern Languages and Literatures).

Santiago Fouz-Hernández is Reader in Hispanic Studies at Durham University (UK). He is author of Cuerpos de cine, Masculinidades carnales en el cine y la cultura popular contemporánea (Bellaterra, 2013), co-author of Live Flesh: The Male Body in Contemporary Spanish Cinema (I. B. Tauris, 2007), editor of Mysterious Skin: Male Bodies in Contemporary Cinema (I. B. Tauris, 2009) and co-editor of Madonna's Drowned Worlds (Ashgate, 2004) and Re-thinking 'Identities': Cultural Articulations of Alterity and Resistance in the New Millennium (Peter Lang, 2014). Currently he is preparing a monograph on the late Bigas Luna for Manchester University Press and an edited collection entitled Spanish Erotic Cinema for Edinburgh University Press.

Stuart Green is Senior Lecturer in Spanish at University of Leeds, where he teaches and researches on peninsular culture from the Golden Age to the present day. He is author of From Silver Screen to Spanish Stage

(University of Wales Press, 2011), a study of the influence of Hollywood on theatre in Spain. He has published on theatre and film in journals such as Modern Language Review, Bulletin of Spanish Studies and Don Galán. Since 2011, much of his research has focused on the ways in which contemporary theatre, television, cinema and music engage with the question of ethnic diversity. He is member of the editorial board of journal Estreno and co-editor of New Cinemas.

Alejandro Melero is Lecturer at University Carlos III de Madrid. He has published several articles dealing with the representation of sex on screen and queer and gender theory, and contributed to Gender and Spanish Cinema (Berg, 2004) and Hispanic and Lusophone Women Filmmakers (Manchester University Press, 2012). His books Placeres ocultos: Gays y lesbianas en el cine español de la Transición and Guía ilustrada del cine europeo were both published by Notorious in 2010.

Alberto Mira is Reader in Spanish and Film Studies at Oxford Brookes University. He teaches Film Narrative and Star Studies. His publications include Miradas insumisas, De Sodoma a chueca and Historical Dictionary of Spanish Cinema. He has worked extensively on gay culture in Spain, particularly on film reception. Currently he is working on a series on essays on autobiographical representation in the work of Spanish gay writers and filmmakers, as well as a long-term project on Spanish Star Sara Montiel.

Rob Stone is Professor of Film Studies at the University of Birmingham, author of Spanish Cinema (Longman, 2001), Flamenco in the Works of Federico García Lorca and Carlos Saura (Edwin Mellen, 2004), Julio Medem (Manchester University Press, 2007) and Walk, Don't Run: The Cinema of Richard Linklater (Columbia University Press, 2013). He is co-editor of The Unsilvered Screen: Surrealism on Film (Wallflower Press, 2007), Screening Songs in Hispanic and Lusophone Cinema (Manchester University Press, 2012) and A Companion to Luis Buñuel (Wiley-Blackwell, 2013) and is co-author of Basque Cinema: a Cultural and Political History (I. B. Tauris, 2015)

Kathleen Vernon is Associate Professor and Chair of the Department of Hispanic Languages and Literature at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, where she teaches courses on Spanish and Latin American cinema and culture. She has published widely on various aspects of Spanish-language cinema from the 1930s to the present, with special focus on melodrama, film music and sound, and women's cinema. Her most recent publications include A Companion to Pedro Almodóvar, co-edited with Marvin D'Lugo (Wiley-Blackwell, 2013). She is currently completing a book on voice, music and sound in film, Listening to Spanish Cinema, and two multi-authored books, The Mediation of Everyday Life: An Oral History of Cinema-Going in 1940s and 1950s Spain and Film Magazines, Fashion and Photography in 1940s and 1950s Spain.

Duncan Wheeler is Associate Professor in Spanish at the University of Leeds, where he is also a member of the Executive Committee of the Centre for World Cinemas. Until recently, he was a Leverhulme Research Fellow working on the role of arts and cultural institutions in Spain's transition to democracy, the subject of his second monograph – following Golden Age Drama in Contemporary Spain: The Comedia on Page, Stage and Screen (University of Wales Press/University of Chicago Press, 2012). A published translator and author of over twenty peer-reviewed articles and book chapters, Duncan is also Reviews Editor for New Cinemas and subject editor of The Literary Encyclopedia.

Tom Whittaker is Senior Lecturer in Film and Spanish Cultural Studies at the University of Liverpool. He is the author of The Films of Elías Querejeta: A Producer of Landscapes (University of Wales Press, 2001), and has published widely on Spanish cinema. He is co-editor of Locating the Voice in Film: Global Practices and Critical Approaches (Oxford University Press, 2016) and is currently completing a monograph entitled Quinquis, Criminality and Sound in Spanish Film.

Eva Woods Peiró is an Associate Professor at Vassar College in Hispanic Studies. She has taught and mentored in the Media Studies, Latin American and Latino Studies and Women's Studies. Her books include White Gypsies: Race and Stardom in Spanish Musicals, (Minnesota University Press, 2012), Visualizing Spanish Modernity (Berg, 2005), co-edited with Susan Larson (University of Kentucky), and the forthcoming, collaborative Cinema and the Mediation of Everyday Life: An Oral History of Cinema-Going in 1940s and 1950s Spain (Berghahn).

Sarah Wright is Senior Lecturer at Royal Holloway, University of London, where she specialises in Spanish theatre, film and cultural studies. She is the author of The Trickster-Function in the Theatre of García Lorca (Tamesis, 2000), Tales of Seduction: The Figure of Don Juan in Spanish Culture (I. B. Tauris, 2007) and The Child in Spanish Cinema (Manchester University Press, 2013).