Notes on contributors

Hugh Adlington is Senior Lecturer in English Literature at the University of Birmingham. He is a co-editor of The Oxford Handbook of the Early Modern Sermon (Oxford, 2011), and editor of vol. 2 of The Oxford Edition of the Sermons of John Donne, gen. ed. P. McCullough (Oxford University Press, forthcoming).

Christopher Burlinson is College Lecturer in English at Jesus College, Cambridge. His recent publications include Edmund Spenser: Selected Letters and Other Papers (Oxford University Press, 2009), co-edited with Andrew Zurcher, and, with Ruth Connolly, a special edition of Studies in English Literature (winter 2012), entitled Editing Stuart Poetry.

David J. Crankshaw is Lecturer in the History of Early Modern Christianity at King's College London. Having published, inter alia, on St Paul's Cathedral and on ecclesiastical statesmanship during the Reformation, he is completing an edition of Proceedings of the Privy Council of Queen Elizabeth I, 1582-1583 (Boydell and Brewer).

Kenneth Fincham is Professor of Early Modern History at the University of Kent. He has published widely on British religious history c.1550–c.1700, and is a co-director of the Clergy of the Church of England Database project, 1540–1835 (www.theclergydatabase.org.uk).

William Gibson is Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Oxford Brookes University. He is author of a number of books on early modern religion, including A Social History of the Domestic Chaplain, 1530-1840 (Leicester University Press, 1997), as well as studies of Benjamin Hoadly and the trial of the seven bishops in 1688. He is co-editor of the Oxford Handbook of the British Sermon 1688-1901 (Oxford University Press, 2012).

Tom Lockwood is Senior Lecturer in English Literature at the University of Birmingham. He has published articles on manuscripts and their cultures from the seventeenth to the twentieth centuries, and is currently working towards an edition of Charles Lamb's Specimens of English Dramatic Poets (1808) for The Complete Works of Charles and Mary Lamb (Oxford University Press).

Erica Longfellow is Dean of Divinity, Chaplain and Fellow of New College, Oxford. She is the author of Women and Religious Writing in Early Modern England (Cambridge University Press, 2004) and editor, with Elizabeth Clarke, of an online edition of the life-writing of Elizabeth Isham (<http://www2.warwick.ac.uk/fac/arts/ren/projects/isham/>).

Mary Morrissey is Lecturer in the Department of English Literature, University of Reading. She is author of Politics and the Paul's Cross Sermons, 1558–1642 (Oxford University Press, 2011) and is editing John Donne's Paul's Cross sermons for The Oxford Edition of the Sermons of John Donne.

Notes on contributors

Grant Tapsell is Fellow and Tutor in History at Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford. He is the author of The Personal Rule of Charles II, 1681–85 (Boydell and Brewer, 2007), joint author (with George Southcombe) of Restoration Politics, Religion and Culture: Britain and Ireland, 1660–1714 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010), and editor of the collection The Later Stuart Church, 1660–1714 (Manchester University Press, 2012).

Angus Vine is Lecturer in English Studies at the University of Stirling. He is the author of In Defiance of Time: Antiquarian Writing in Early Modern England (Oxford University Press, 2010), and is one of the editors of the 'Oxford Francis Bacon'.

Gillian Wright is Senior Lecturer in English Literature at the University of Birmingham. She has published on early modern women's devotional reading and writing, compilation practices in manuscript and print, and the reception of classical literature in English, and is the author of Producing Women's Poetry (Cambridge University Press, 2013).