A great many people and institutions have supported me in writing this book. I especially thank my parents, Jeremy and Cecilia Chance for their generous financial assistance with the first stages, the Harold Hyam Wingate Foundation who offered me a scholarship to fund doctoral fees and travel costs to the USA, the Design History Society for awarding me a generous publication grant towards the costs of illustrations and Buckinghamshire New University for awarding me two research grants to enable me to finish the book. I would also like to thank the staff of Kellogg College and the Department for Continuing Education, University of Oxford for its support for this project and Sarah and Hugh Crisp for donating airmiles to get me to America.

Dr Geoffrey Tyack, Fellow of Kellogg College, Oxford, and Director of Stanford University in Oxford, and Professor Stephen Ward of Oxford Brookes University inspired my enthusiasm for American history and their wisdom, encouragement and friendship has been invaluable. I would also like to thank Professor Stephen Daniels, Dr Mara Keire who advised on the US research and Professor William Whyte of St John’s College Oxford who would not take ‘no’ for an answer when he asked, ‘Have you found a publisher for that book yet?’ I thank the staff and readers at Manchester University Press for making that happen.

Many others have kindly discussed the research with me and offered advice. These include historians of gardens, parks and company towns, Hazel Conway, Clare Hickman, Janet Waymark, Rebecca Preston, Karen Jessup, Dianne Long, Amanda Rees and delegates at the annual Design History Society conferences. Sir Adrian Cadbury, Benedict Cadbury, Keith Tandy, Dolly Green, Sonja Bata, Bill Anderson (former Chairman of the NCR), Ian Ormerod (former Director of the NCR, UK), Alan Shrimpton and Janet Mawson of the Bournville Village Trust, and Daniel Winterbottom, Professor of Landscape Architecture at the University of Washington, all shared their memories and expertise with me. Charles and Margo Burnette helped me with research in Philadelphia. Carolyn Johnson, Krysta Johnson and her parents and Lena Brodersen and Peter Malcolm offered hospitality in Washington DC, Massachusetts and Chicago and made my time in the USA even more enjoyable.

I am beholden to the generosity and courtesy of the many archivists and librarians I have been lucky enough to meet or correspond with. Especial thanks must go to Jeff Opt and Curt Dalton at the National Cash Register Company archive at Dayton History, Ohio and Sarah Foden, the Cadbury archivist, and to the staff of the Bodleian Library and the Vere Harmsworth Library in Oxford for their unstinting professionalism. I would also like to thank Judith Wright, Archivist, Boots Co. Ltd; Carol Lockman, Marge McNinch, Jon Williams and other staff at the Hagley Library, Wilmington, Delaware; the staff of the Manuscripts Division of the Library of Congress, Washington DC and the staff of Historic Pullman and the many other archivists and librarians for their help and hospitality.

The creation and delivery of a book always affects family and friends who have to put up with hours of absence and preoccupation. I thank all my friends and my siblings for helping me to keep life in perspective, and particularly my colleague Ray Batchelor who made invaluable suggestions at the final stages and who makes me laugh when things get tough. I am indebted to my children, William and Joanna Beaufoy and stepdaughters Hatty and Cottia Thorowgood who have been constant sources of inspiration and encouragement. The forbearance, kindness and love of my husband, Jeremy has been steadfast and I dedicate this book to him, to my dear mother Cecilia, who I sadly lost during the final months of writing and to my father Jeremy, who is always quietly my guide.
