The essays in this volume were first presented at a colloquium on ‘Writing the history of parliament in early modern England’ that was held at Jesus College, Oxford, on 20 April 2013. We should like to thank all those who helped make that event a success, and in particular Andrew Boyle, Alan Cromatie, Clive Holmes, Katie McKeogh, Hannah Smith and Blair Worden. We are grateful for the sponsorship that we received from the Centre for Early Modern British and Irish History in the Faculty of History at the University of Oxford, from the History of Parliament Trust, and from Jesus College, Oxford.

Susan Brigden, Peter Ghosh, Malcolm Smuts, George Southcombe and Blair Worden provided us with invaluable advice, criticism and encouragement when we were turning the proceedings of the colloquium into this volume. We should also like to thank the editorial team at Manchester University Press, and Emma Brennan in particular, for their expertise and patience during the book’s long gestation. Our greatest thanks go to our families: to Karin Cavill, to Ann and Norbert Gajda, and to James, Laurence and Francis Phythian-Adams. We dedicate this work to Susan Brigden and John Watts, who first taught us as undergraduates how to study ‘Literature and politics in early modern England’.
