Acknowledgements

This book would not have been possible without the help of many, many people and I take this opportunity to thank them all for providing me with information, ideas, advice and support. I thank Manchester University Press for making the book possible and the Centre for Heritage Imaging and Collection Care, University of Manchester Library, for assistance with illustrations. I am grateful to Ralph Footring and Martin Hargreaves for their help in producing the book.

My colleagues at Manchester Museum have been very encouraging, especially Dr Nick Merriman and Tristram Besterman. Dr Dmitri Logunov has collaborated with me on Russian ornithologists and Paddy Moss translated a Finnish passage for me. Other colleagues throughout the University of Manchester, particularly librarians of the University Library and of John Rylands Library, have been very supportive (and patient).

Dr Kirsten Greer of Nipissing University has collaborated with me on the Dressers and I am very grateful to her for her help and encouragement. I am also grateful to the late Prof. John Pickstone, as well as Prof. Matthew Cobb (both University of Manchester), Prof. Patience Schell (University of Aberdeen), Dr Sam Alberti (National Museums Scotland) and Prof. Tim Birkhead (University of Sheffield) for encouragement and useful discussion. Andrew Cole was very helpful with information relating to his books on egg collecting (Cole, 2006; Cole and Trobe, 2000). Stan da Casto and Prof. Joel Weintraub (California State University) helped me understand Henry Dresser's time in Texas and his association with Adolphus Heermann. Prof. Nigel Collar (University of Cambridge) and Philip Hall helped with information on Robert Swinhoe and Dr Nicholas Keegan helped me with information on the British consular service. Prof. Zbigniew Wszolek (Mayo Clinic, Jacksonville, Florida) helped me with information on Benedykt Dybowski. Dr Karl Schulze-Hagen helped me with information on Joseph Wolf. I thank Paul Hobson for very useful discussion on Henry Seeböhm. I thank Alexander Buturlin of Moscow for inviting Dr Dmitri Logunov and me to participate in the Second Readings Dedicated to the Memory of Sergei Buturlin – his father – held in Ulyanovsk in 2005, which made for a particularly memorable experience.

I thank my collaborators from the project 'Animals as Things, Animals as Signs', particularly Prof. Liv Emma Thorsen and Prof. Brita Brenna (University of Oslo), Prof. Karen Rader (Victoria Commonwealth University, Richmond, Virginia), Dr Nigel Rothfels (University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee), Prof. Brian Ogilvie (University of Massachusetts) and Dr Adam Dodd (formerly University of Oslo, now University of Queensland, Australia). Our collaborations helped me get my thoughts in order for the present book, and have been enormously stimulating. Prof. Thorsen also read an entire draft of the book, and her comments were extremely useful. I thank Prof. Marit Hauan (Tromsø University Museum) and Prof. Lena Aarekol (Polar Museum, Tromsø) for giving me the opportunity to participate in workshops and seminars in Spitzbergen and Tromsø exploring Arctic narratives, exploration and collecting, including some of my work on Henry Dresser.

I am grateful to Jim Dresser of the Dresser Family Worldwide Genealogy Center, USA, for assistance of various kinds, to Richard Tetley for assistance in finding information on Joseph Dresser Tetley and to the late Richard Walmisley for assistance with information on Eleanor Walmisley Dresser. I thank John Hickman, Richard Lines (of the Norwood Society) and Stephen Oxford for assistance with information on Norwood, and Nicholas Reed for very useful discussion on the time spent in Norwood by the artist Camille Pissarro.

I am most grateful to Mike Whittam for his help in developing this book – discussing ideas, reviewing chapters – and for general tolerance and encouragement.

Museums

I thank colleagues in many museums, both in the UK and around the world, who have provided me with information on collections and collectors. I especially thank Bob McGowan (National Museums Scotland) for help in many, many ways and for lots of stimulating discussion about Victorian collectors, and Stephen Moran (formerly of Inverness Museum) for general encouragement. I thank Dr Clem Fisher (World Museum Liverpool) for helping in many ways with this project, and Tony Parker for information on specimens in the collection of World Museum Liverpool. I thank the curators of the bird collections at the Natural History Museum (NHM, London and Tring), Dr Robert Prŷs-Jones, Mark Adams, Dr Jo Cooper, Douglas Russell and Hein van Grouw, for help in many ways. I thank Robert in particular for sharing with me his unpublished notes on the relationship between Richard Bowdler Sharpe and Henry Dresser. Jeremy Adams (formerly of the Booth Museum of Natural History, Brighton) helped me with information on Edward Booth and on Thomas Parkin's collection. Dr Michael Brooke and Matt Lowe (Cambridge University Museum of Zoology) provided information on collection holdings. Igor Fadeev (Moscow State Darwin Museum), Tony Irwin (Norwich Castle Museum), Maggie Reilly (Hunterian Museum, University of Glasgow) and Dr Tony Walentowicz (formerly Chelmsford Museum) have all been very helpful in providing information on collections in their museums. James Hamill was very helpful regarding Arthur Dresser's manuscripts in the British Museum.

I thank all those curators who have helped me in my searches for specimens of Ross's Gull and other birds collected by Sergei Buturlin (see McGhie and Logunov, 2005, for a full list).

Libraries and archives

I thank the following individuals and institutions for assistance in locating archives and providing copies, in no particular order: Louise Clarke, Daisy Cunynghame, Hellen Pethers and John Rose (NHM Library and Archives); Dana Fisher (Ernst Mayr Library, MCZ, Harvard University); Patsy Hale (Harriet Irving Library, University of New Brunswick, Fredericton); Lucy Jardine (Provincial Archives of New Brunswick, Fredericton); Daryl Johnson and Peter Larocque (New Brunswick Museum, St John); Eleanor MacLean and Dr Richard Virr (Rare Books and Special Collections, McGill University Library, Montreal); Sandra Taylor (Lilly Library, Indiana University); the late Peter Meadows and Adam Perkins (University of Cambridge Archives); staff at the Canadian National Archives (Ottawa); Lindsay Ould (Croydon Borough Archivist) and staff of the Museum of Croydon; Heljä Strömberg (Central Archives for Finnish Business Records (ELKA), Mikkeli, Finland); Andrew McDougall (National Museums Scotland Library); Tad Bennicoff (Smithsonian Institution Archives, Washington, DC); Laura Outterside (Royal Society, London); Gina Douglas (Linnean Society, London); and staff of the University of Glasgow Archives.

I am especially grateful to Olga Borodina, Curator of the Museum of Local Lore, History and Economy, Ulyanovsk, Russia, for providing Dr Dmitri Logunov and me with copies of letters from Henry Dresser and Otto Ottosson to Sergei Buturlin.

Excerpts from correspondence from Henry Dresser to Alfred Newton are reproduced by permission of the Syndics of Cambridge University Library. Excerpts from correspondence from Henry Dresser to John Harvie-Brown are reproduced by kind permission of National Museums Scotland. Excerpts from letters in the Blacker-Wood Autograph Letter Collection are reproduced courtesy of McGill University Library (Rare Books and Special Collections). All material from the Natural History Museum Library and Archives (London) is used here by permission of the Trustees of the Natural History Museum.