Many individuals contributed to the completion of this book in different ways. A number of people read and commented on various drafts: Sophie De Schaepdrijver, Rod Kedward, Julian Jackson, John Horne, Eloise Moss and Laure Humbert. I extend special thanks to Richard Vinen, my former doctoral supervisor, for all his advice, humour and support; and Rebecca Jinks, valued friend, sounding board and proofreader since our first year of undergraduate studies. Discussions and debates with fellow occupation historians further helped me to clarify my ideas, so thanks to Emmanuel Debruynne, Bernard Wilkin, Alex Dowdall, Larissa Wegner, Matthias Meirlaen, Annette Becker and Philippe Nivet. Tammy Proctor and Deborah Buffton kindly posted me important documents from the USA. Pamela Pilbeam and Daniel Beer provided references that helped me to secure funding for my research. The team at Manchester University Press were patient, responsive and supportive.

I wish to thank those organisations whose financial assistance allowed me to pursue the research behind this book: the Arts and Humanities Research Council, the Institute of Historical Research, King's College London and the Historial de la Grande Guerre. My project was facilitated by being able to live and later work in France as an EU citizen in May 2009–August 2010 and April 2013–July 2014. During my time as an immigrant, I learnt much about French culture and history, and met people of different nationalities whose perspectives on life enriched my own and whose friendship was crucial to my intellectual and personal development. I am thankful for this privilege and saddened by the prospect that in the future British citizens may not be able to do so as easily.

I am grateful to numerous institutions and their staff for their assistance, notably: the British Library, King's College London Maughan Library, Senate House Library (University of London), the Imperial War

Family and friends provided patience, understanding and support throughout the process of researching and writing this book. In particular, my parents, my uncle Brian, and my grandmother have supported me throughout the years. My wife, Martina, offered unceasing encouragement, putting up with my time abroad and much more. Marjorie Burghart helped me as a proofreader, friend and cultural guide. My good friends Katie Turner and Peter Sutton were also work companions in the early years of the project, and I benefited greatly from our discussions. My twin brother Liam and close friends James Grey, Emma-Louise Hopkins, James and Claire Hunt, Verity and Mark Reynolds, Kari Trogen and Laura Young provided respite from work when needed. So too did Vincent Sagues, Patricia Brisard, Nadège Brossier and friends I made while living in France: Julie Koo See Lin, Manuel and Anne-Sophie Pruvost-Zetina, Christophe Leprêtre, Claire Mariencourt, Yi Wang, María García Arraco, Chiara Luciani, Lisa Munzke, Nina Skrobala, Stéphanie Genay, Megan Gilmore, Stephanie Bergh, Delphine Diaz, Raphaële Balu and Maram Kane. Je vous en remercie tous.
