NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

David Atkinson is lecturer in Geography at the University of Hull. His research interests include the histories of geographical thought and geopolitical theory: his publications include the co-edited collection Geopolitical Traditions (2000). He also works upon the historical and cultural geographies of Liberal and Fascist Rome, and upon Italian colonialism in Africa. He was a member of the Leverhulme Imperial Cities research project team.

Iain Black is Lecturer in Geography at King's College London. He has written on the economic, social and architectural transformation of the City of London in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. He is currently working on a project, funded by the British Academy, concerning the commercial architecture of Sir Edwin Lutyens in late-imperial London.

Christopher Breward is Professor in Historical and Cultural Studies at the London College of Fashion. His publications include The Culture of Fashion (1995), The Hidden Consumer (1999) and co-edited collections Material Memories (1999) and The Englishness of English Dress (2002). He is currently working on the history of fashion in London.

Denis Cosgrove is Humboldt Professor of Geography at UCLA, and a Visiting Professor at Royal Holloway, University of London. His publications include The Palladian Landscape (1993), Social Formation and Symbolic Landscape (1998), Mappings (1999) and Apollo's Eye: A Cartographic Genealogy of the Earth in the Western Imagination (2001). He was a co-director of the Leverhulme Imperial Cities project.

Felix Driver is Professor of Human Geography at Royal Holloway, University of London. His books include Geography Militant: Cultures of Exploration and Empire (2001), Power and Pauperism (1993) and Nature and Science (1992), edited with Gillian Rose. He was a co-director of the Leverhulme Imperial Cities project, and has recently been involved in a creative arts project at Royal Holloway on the theme of 'Visualising Geography'.

Yaël Simpson Fletcher is visiting Assistant Professor of History at the University of the South. Her work explores questions of immigration, race, and national identity in twentieth-century France and Algeria. She is preparing a book manuscript, "Contesting Frenchness: City, Nation, and Empire in Marseilles, 1919-1939," and has contributed chapters to Domesticating the Empire: Race, Gender, and Family Life in French and Dutch Colonialism, 1830-1962 and Gender, Sexuality and Colonial Modernities.

David Gilbert is Senior Lecturer in Geography at Royal Holloway, University of London. He has worked on the influence of imperialism on modern London, particularly in relation to urban planning and the representation of London in travel writing and tourist guides. He has also written on the histories of community and industrial protest. His publications include Class, Community and Collective Action (1992), and The Atlas of Industrial Protest (1996). He was a co-director of the Leverhulme Imperial Cities project.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Anthony Gristwood recently completed his Ph.D. in Geography at the University of Cambridge. His teaching and research interests are in urban, cultural and political geography, the historical geography of Spain and the use of ICT in geographical education. He lectures on contemporary Europe, cities and development at the International Study Centre of Queen's University (Canada), Herstmonceux Castle, Sussex.

Claire Hancock is maitre de conferences at the University of Paris-XII-Val de Marne. Her doctoral work concerned representations of Paris and London in tourist guides and travel literature. More recent work has explored European representations of New York, and the wider issue of urban and travelling identities in Europe and the Americas.

Andrew Hassam convenes the Australian Studies degree programme at the University of Wales, Lampeter. He has held research fellowships in Canberra, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide and Sydney. His publications include Sailing to Australia (1994) and No Privacy for Writing (1995). His most recent book is Through Australian Eyes: Colonial Perceptions of Imperial Britain (2000).

John MacKenzie is Professor Emeritus of Imperial History at Lancaster University and Honorary Professor in the Research Institute of Irish and Scottish Studies at Aberdeen University. His many books include Propaganda and Empire, The Empire of Nature and (as editor) Imperialism and Popular Culture and Imperialism and the Natural World.

Anna Notaro is a Research Fellow in Visual Culture at the University of Nottingham, working on a project on 'Literary and Visual Representations of Three American Cities (New York, Chicago, Los Angeles), 1870-1930'. She was a research fellow on the Leverhulme Imperial Cities project at Royal Holloway.

Rebecca Preston is a freelance researcher and writer on the history of gardening. Her PhD at Royal Holloway on the culture and politics of gardening in nineteenth-century Britain was completed in 1999. Her published work explores the relationship between the practice of gardening and social identity.

Deborah Ryan is Postdoctoral Research Fellow in the School of History and International Affairs at the University of Ulster at Jordanstown. Her publications include The Ideal Home Through the Twentieth Century (1997), and she is currently researching the life and pageants of Frank Lascelles, 1875-1934. She was a research fellow on the Leverhulme Imperial Cities project at Royal Holloway.

Jonathan Schnee is Professor of History at the Georgia Institute of Technology. He has written books on Ben Tillett: Portrait of a Labour Leader, Labour's Conscience: the Labour Left 1945-51, and George Lansbury. His most recent book is London 1900: The Imperial Metropolis (1999). He is currently writing a biography of the river Thames.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Bill Schwarz is an editor of History Workshop Journal, Cultural Studies and New Formations. He has edited Crises in the British State 1880–1930 (1985) and The Expansion of England: Race, Ethnicity and Cultural History (1996). He teaches at Goldsmiths College, University of London.

Tori Smith is an Assistant Professor of History at Trent University in Ontario, Canada. She is working on a book based on her PhD dissertation at Rutgers on the representation of Queen Victoria in the British Empire.

Jill Steward is Senior Lecturer in the School of Art and Social Sciences at the University of Northumbria at Newcastle. She is joint editor of The City in Central Europe, Culture and Society and has published on the history of tourism, spas and popular travel writing.