Acknowledgements

This volume is the outcome of two events, a conference held at the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, Munich, Germany, in 2015 and a seminar at Victoria University of Wellington, Aotearoa New Zealand, in 2011. The book was nurtured by the lively discussions spurred by papers presented and benefited from the ongoing intellectual engagement with conference participants as well as other authors we commissioned. It is, therefore, the product of the associated scholarly network, including university academics, museum professionals and community leaders, who are devoted to (re) thinking curatorship for the museums of the future.

We are indebted to a range of institutions and organisations that facilitated the realisation of the conference, seminar and book with their generous funding. We wish to thank the Goethe-Institut, the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, Munich (LMU), the Department für Kulturwissenschaften and the Institut für Ethnologie at the LMU for their financial and logistical support. Further funding was received from the European Union's H2020 Research and Innovation Programme under the Marie Skłodowska-Curie Grant Agreement No. 659660 awarded to co-editor Philipp Schorch. The Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences at Victoria University of Wellington, and the Canadian High Commission, Wellington, deserve thanks for their research grants which supported the hosting of the seminar, associated travel and editorial assistance. We also would like to express our appreciation to the anonymous reviewers who assisted us with their critical comments and reflections on the manuscript.

In addition, we are grateful for the efforts of our student assistants who worked with us to organise and run the conference, and our editorial assistants, who helped with copyediting and finalising the manuscript: many thanks to Sasha Gora and Susette Goldsmith. Finally, we would both like to extend our heartfelt thanks to our partners, Eliza and Bronwyn, who put up with us while we were completing this project.
