NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Paul Basu is Reader in Material Culture and Museum Studies at University College London. He is the author of Highland Homecomings: Genealogy and Heritage Tourism in the Scottish Diaspora (Abingdon: Routledge, 2007), co-editor (with Sharon Macdonald) of Exhibition Experiments (Oxford: Blackwell, 2007), and currently managing editor of the Journal of Material Culture. In recent years his research and museum practice has engaged with landscape, memory and cultural heritage in Sierra Leone.

Gareth Knapman is a Research Fellow at Monash University, Melbourne. His chapter is based on research undertaken during a Thomas Ramsay Science and Humanities Fellowship at Museum Victoria. He has also published on the anthropology collections held by Museum Victoria.

Sarah Longair has recently completed a PhD at Birkbeck College, University of London, and is an education officer at the British Museum. In 2010–11, she led a research project to examine the needs of museum professionals in East Africa for the British Museum Africa Programme.

John McAleer is Curator of Imperial and Maritime History at the National Maritime Museum, Greenwich. He is the author of Representing Africa: Landscape, Exploration and Empire in Southern Africa, 1780–1870 (Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2010) and (with H. V. Bowen and Robert J. Blyth) Monsoon Traders: The Maritime World of the East India Company (London: Scala, 2011).

Conal McCarthy is Director of the Museum and Heritage Studies programme at Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. He is the author of Exhibiting Māori: A History of Colonial Cultures of Display (Oxford: Berg, 2007). His latest book is Museums and Maori: Heritage Professionals, Indigenous Collections, Current Practice (Wellington: Te Papa Press, 2011).

Philip McEvansoneya is a Lecturer in the Department of History of Art at Trinity College, Dublin.

Savithri Preetha Nair is an independent scholar who has published on collecting, museums and the shaping of the sciences in India. Her recent publications include: Science and the Changing Environment in India, 1780–1920 (with Richard Axelby) and Raja Serfoji II: Science, Medicine and Enlightenment in Tanjore (2010 and 2012 respectively). She is currently working on a biography of the Indian (female) cytobotanist E. K. Janaki Ammal.

Sadiya Qureshi is a Lecturer in Modern History at the University of Birmingham and the author of Peoples on Parade: Exhibitions, Empire and Anthropology in Nineteenth-Century Britain (Chicago, IL: University of Chicago Press, 2011).

Jennifer Wellington is a PhD candidate at Yale University.

Claire Wintle is a Lecturer in the History of Art and Design at the University of Brighton. She has worked in collections and public programmes at National Museums Liverpool and the Royal Pavilion and Museums, Brighton & Hove. Her first book, Colonial Collecting and Display: Encounters through Material Culture in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, will be published by Berghahn Books.