Contributors

Thomas Adam (PhD University of Leipzig 1998) is Professor of Transnational History at the University of Texas at Arlington. He is the author of Intercultural Transfers and the Making of the Modern World, 1800–2000, Transnational Philanthropy: The Mond Family’s Support for Public Institutions in Western Europe from 1890 to 1938, and Buying Respectability: Philanthropy and Urban Society in Transnational Perspective, 1840s to 1930s. He is also the founding editor of the Yearbook of Transnational History.

Nicholas Canny is Emeritus Professor of History at the National University of Ireland, Galway. An expert on early modern history broadly defined, he edited the first volume of The Oxford History of the British Empire (1998) and, with Philip D. Morgan, The Oxford Handbook of the Atlantic World, c.1450–c.1850 (2011). His major book is Making Ireland British, 1580–1650 (Oxford, 2001). He remains an active publishing scholar on Atlantic History and is also completing a book entitled Writing Ireland’s History: From the Sixteenth Century to Yesterday for Oxford University Press.

Giuliana Chamedes is an Assistant Professor of European International History at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. Her articles have appeared in the Journal of Contemporary History, the Historical Journal, and French Culture, Politics, and Society. Her first book, Catholic Internationalism: The Vatican and the European Order, 1918–1958, is under contract.

Konrad H. Jarausch is Lurcy Professor of European Civilization at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill as well as Senior Fellow of the Zentrum für Zeitgeschichtliche Forschung in Potsdam. He has written or edited more than forty books on German and European History, most recently Out of Ashes: A New History of Europe in the Twentieth Century as well as Different Germans, Many Germanys and The Cold War: Historiography, Memory and Representation.

Susanne Lachenicht is Professor of Early Modern History at Bayreuth University, Germany. Her publications include Information und Propaganda: Die Presse deutscher Jakobiner im Elsaß (Munich, 2004), Hugenotten in Europa und Nordamerika: Migration und Integration in der Frühen Neuzeit (Frankfurt am Main, New York, and Chicago, 2010), Religious Refugees in Europa, Asia and North America (Hamburg, 2007), Diaspora Identities: Exile, Nationalism and Cosmopolitanism in Past and Present (Frankfurt am Main, New York, and Chicago, 2009), Die Französische Revolution (Darmstadt, 2012), Europeans Engaging the Atlantic: Knowledge and Trade (Frankfurt am Main and New York, 2014) and, as editor with Dagmar Freist, Connecting Worlds and People: Early Modern Diasporas (London, 2016).

Ariane Leendertz is a senior researcher at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies in Cologne. Previously she has held positions at the Amerika Institut of the Ludwig-Maximilians Universität, Munich, and at the Department of History at the University of Tübingen. Moreover she was granted visiting fellowships at Princeton University, and by the German Historical Institute in Washington, DC. Her research focuses on German and US history of the twentieth century, the United States in the world, intellectual history, and the history of science. Recent publications include ‘US-Außenminister John Kerry und der Krieg. Essay über biographische Kontinuität und amerikanische Politik’ (Zeitgeschichte online 2016/17) and Die neue Wirklichkeit: Semantische Neuvermessungen und Politik seit den 1970er-Jahren (Frankfurt/Main, 2016, ed. with Wencke Meteling).

Charlotte A. Lerg teaches American Cultural History at Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität Munich, where she is also managing director of the Lasky Center for Transatlantic Studies. Furthermore, she has taught at the University of Münster and has held fellowships at the John W. Kluge Center (Library of Congress) and at the German-Historical-Institute in Washington, DC. Recent publications include: ‘Off Campus: German Propaganda Professors in America 1914–1917’ in The Academic World in the Era of the Great War, ed. Marie-Eve Chagnon and Tomás Irish (London, 2017) and (with Heike Bungert) Transnationale Universitätsgeschichte (Stuttgart, 2017).

Charles S. Maier is Leverett Saltonstall Professor of History at Harvard and served as director of CES from 1994 to 2001 and in the fall of 2006. He was distinguished fellow at the Woodrow Wilson Center for Scholars in Washington during the spring of 2011, taught at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales in spring 2007, and was a Humboldt Prize fellow in Berlin in 2003. Maier’s ‘Leviathan 2.0: Inventing Modern State’ was published in autumn 2012 as a contribution to A World Connecting, vol. 5, edited by A. Iriye and J. Osterhammel. Other books include Among Empires: American Ascendancy and its Predecessors (2006); Dissolution: The Crisis of Communism and the End of East Germany (1997); The Unmasterable Past: History, Holocaust, and German National Identity (1988); In Search of Stability: Explorations in Historical Political Economy (1987); and Recasting Bourgeois Europe (1975, 1988). He directs the Weatherhead Center’s Initiative in Global History (WIGH) with Sven Beckert.

Giles Scott-Smith holds the Ernst van der Beugel Chair in the Diplomatic History of Transatlantic Relations since WW II at Leiden University, and is the academic director of the Roosevelt Institute for American Studies. From 2013 to 2016 he was Chair of the Transatlantic Studies Association. His most recent publication (with Charlotte Lerg) is Campaigning Culture and the Global Cold War: The Journals of the Congress for Cultural Freedom (Palgrave, 2017).