Acknowledgements

I am grateful to the Economic and Social Research Council, which funded the research for this book through the Future Research Leaders scheme (grant number ES/L010062/1). Without their support this work would not have been possible.

I am also grateful to Professor Matthew Hibberd, for all his support during the project. I would also like to thank Professor Neil Blain for his very insightful feedback on early drafts of the manuscript for this book.

Many thanks also to Professor Claes de Vreese and his colleagues at the Amsterdam School of Communication Research, University of Amsterdam; Dr Enric Castelló, Dr Marta Montagut and their colleagues at Rovira i Virgili University, Tarragona; and Professor Michele Sorice and his colleagues at Luiss University, Rome, who gave me the opportunity to present early findings of this research during my visits to their institutions in 2015. Also many thanks to the anonymous reviewers of both the proposal for this book and the related journal articles that resulted from the same research.

I would like to thank all my interviewees from BBC Scotland and STV, the broadcasting regulator, the political communicators from both sides of the Scottish referendum debate, and the civil society representatives who kindly took the time to meet me and answer my questions. The 2014 Scottish referendum was a sensitive subject and I am truly grateful that so many key participants in the debate agreed to speak with me so shortly after the event, in early 2015. Many thanks also to those who were not interviewed themselves but helped me reach some of these interviewees, as well as the very patient administrators at BBC Scotland and STV who helped me arrange the interviews around everyone's very busy schedules. I would also like to thank BBC Scotland for providing me with copies of earlier campaign coverage in 2013, outside what I had in my own archive, which allowed me to draw comparisons with the analysis of the end of the campaign.

On a personal level, I would like to thank my mother, my partner and my friends for all their love, patience and support. They have made this book possible with their continuous encouragement.

Some of the findings and analysis reported in this book were previously published in different form in the following two journals. Tables 1 and 2 and Figure 1 appeared in the same form as in this book in article (b) below; Figure 2 and many of the quotes from interviews in chapters 3 and 5 appeared in the same form as in this book in article (a):

(a) Dekavalla, M. Issue and game frames in the news: Frame building factors in television coverage of the 2014 Scottish independence referendum. Journalism, published online ahead of print, pp. 1–20. Copyright © 2016 by the Author.

Creative Commons CC-BY: This article is distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 License (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/3.0/>) which permits reproduction and distribution of the work without further permission provided the original work and license are attributed.

(b) Dekavalla, M. Framing referendum campaigns: The 2014 Scottish independence referendum in the press. Media, Culture and Society, 38(6): 793–810. Copyright © 2016 by the Author. Reprinted by permission of SAGE Publications, Ltd.