Notes on contributors

Mark Richard Adams completed his doctorate entitled 'Unpacking the Industrial, Cultural and Historical Contexts of Doctor Who's Fan-Producers' at Brunel University. His research interests include fan cultures, television history, horror films, and queer theory. Recent publications include a chapter on masochism in Screening Twilight: Critical Approaches to a Cinematic Phenomenon (IB Tauris, 2014), and an examination of visual excess in the film Valentine for Style and Form in the Hollywood Slasher Film (Palgrave, 2015).

Xavier Aldana Reyes is Senior Lecturer in English Literature and Film at Manchester Metropolitan University and a founding member of the Manchester Centre for Gothic Studies. He is the author of various books, including Spanish Gothic (2017), Horror: A Literary History (editor, 2016), Horror Film and Affect (2016), Digital Horror (co-editor, 2015) and Body Gothic (2014). He is the editor of the Horror Studies book series run by the University of Wales Press.

Brigid Cherry is a researcher focusing on horror, cult media, and fan cultures. Her work on Clive Barker's film and fiction was completed during a Research Fellowship in Screen Media at St Mary's University, Twickenham, UK. She has previously written on the feminine aesthetic in Hellraiser and Candyman. She has also published work on research into Doctor Who fandom, Gothic television, Twilight and Supernatural fan fiction, and steampunk, and has written a book on fan handicrafting Cult Media, Fandom and Textiles: Handicrafting as Fan Art (Bloomsbury, 2017).

Kevin Corstorphine is Lecturer in English at the University of Hull, UK, where he teaches on American Literature and the Gothic. His research interests are in horror, the Gothic and fantasy fiction, with a focus on the representation of space and place. He has published on authors including Bram Stoker, Ambrose Bierce, H.P. Lovecraft, Robert Bloch, and Stephen King. He is currently working on haunted house stories and the intersections between fiction, 'real-life' narratives, and myth.

Daragh Downes is a Teaching Fellow in the School of English and in the Department of Germanic Studies at Trinity College Dublin. His chief research interests in English are Romanticism plus Charles Dickens and his milieu. He is co-editor (with Trish Ferguson) of Victorian Fiction beyond the Canon (Palgrave Macmillan, 2016).

Gareth James is an independent scholar researching industrial film and television history and marketing. He received his PhD from the University of Exeter for a thesis on the history of Home Box Office (HBO). He has also published on the branding strategies of BBC America, HBO and the Western, and American independent cinema. His other research interests include marketing theory and practice, the New Hollywood, and film and television exhibition.

Darryl Jones is Professor of English and Dean of the Faculty of Arts, Humanities, and Social Sciences at Trinity College Dublin, and a Fellow of the College. He is author/editor of 11 books, most recently an edition of Arthur Conan Doyle's Gothic Tales (Oxford University Press, 2016). He is currently working on H.G. Wells.

Sorcha Ní Fhlainn is Senior Lecturer in Film Studies and American Literature, and a founding member of the Manchester Centre for Gothic Studies at Manchester Metropolitan University. She is the author/editor of numerous publications, with a particular focus on vampires, the Gothic, Hollywood cinema, and popular culture, including The Worlds of Back to the Future: Critical Essays on the Films (McFarland, 2010) and Our Monstrous (S)Kin: Blurring the Boundaries Between Monsters and Humanity (The Inter-Disciplinary Press, 2010), and journal articles with Adaptation (Oxford University Press, 2015) and Horror Studies (Intellect, 2017). She is Reviews Editor for Gothic Studies, the journal of the International Gothic Association (Manchester University Press). Forthcoming publications include the monograph Postmodern Vampires: Film, Fiction, and Popular Culture (with Palgrave, 2018).

Harvey O'Brien teaches Film Studies at University College Dublin. He is the author of Action Movies: The Cinema of Striking Back (Columbia University Press, 2012), The Real Ireland: The Evolution of Ireland in Documentary Film (Manchester University Press, 2004), and co-editor of Keeping it Real: Irish Film and Television (Wallflower, 2004). He has contributed to journals including Historical Journal of Film, Radio, and Television, Neo-Victorian Studies, Monsters and the Monstrous, Éire-Ireland, and Cineaste. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Irish Film Institute, former editor of the journal Film and Film Culture, and a former Associate Director of the Boston Irish Film Festival. He is a frequent media contributor and has writing and editorial credits on film and television work including Seoda (TG4) and The Dying of the Light (Flynn).

Bernard Perron is a Full Professor of Film and Game Studies at the University of Montreal. He has, among others, co-edited The Routledge Companion to Video Games Studies (Routledge, 2014) and Z pour Zombies (Les Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 2015). He has edited Horror Video Games: Essays on the Fusion of Fear and Play (McFarland, 2009) and also written Silent Hill: The Terror Engine (University of Michigan Press, 2012). His research and writing concentrate on video games and the horror genre.

Tony M. Vinci is Assistant Professor of English at Ohio University-Chillicothe, where he teaches Literature, Humanities, and Creative Writing. He is co-editor of Culture, Identities, and Technology in the Star Wars Films (McFarland, 2007) and has published articles in The Journal of Popular Culture, Science Fiction Film and Television, The Faulkner Journal, The Journal of the Midwest Modern Language Association, and numerous collections of literary scholarship and cultural criticism. His research interests include twentieth-century American literature and culture, ethics, trauma studies, critical animality studies, post-humanism, and speculative fiction and film.

Edward Timothy Wallington has a Master of Arts Degree in English from Florida International University, a second Master of Arts Degree in Linguistics for English Language Teaching from Lancaster University, a Diploma in Teaching English Overseas (ESOL) from Manchester University, and a Bachelor of Arts Degree in English from Leeds University. His research focuses on gothic literature and film.