Notes on contributors

Derek Fraser is Emeritus Professor of History at the University of Teesside where he served as Vice-Chancellor for eleven years. He has published books and articles on British social and urban history, including A History of Modern Leeds (1980) which he edited. He is best known for his book The Evolution of the British Welfare State, the 5th edition of which was published in 2017.

Geoffrey Alderman is the Michael Gross Professor of Politics and Contemporary History at the University of Buckingham, formerly Professor of Politics and Contemporary History and Pro-Vice-Chancellor at the University of London. He has published extensively and is the acknowledged authority on the history of Jews in Modern Britain.

Nigel Grizzard is a historian and researcher who has written extensively on Jewish affairs in Yorkshire and takes Jewish heritage tours. He was awarded a Social Science Council Research Grant to survey the remaining Jews in Chapeltown, Leeds in the 1980s. He managed a Heritage Lottery Project – ‘Making their Mark’ – on the contribution of the Jews to the building of Bradford from 2011–13.

James Appell has studied both history and Russian and Eastern European Studies at Oxford. His MPhil thesis was on Jews in the Kovno region. He has spent time as a journalist and has published an article on the differences between the Jewish communities of Leeds and London.

Aaron M. Kent has taught history at Austin Community College, the University of Phoenix and California State University. He is currently an instructor for the University of Maryland (Europe). His Leeds doctoral research has been published in his book, Identity, Migration and Belonging. The Jewish Community of Leeds 1890–1920 (2015).

Anne Kershen was Barnet Shine Senior Research Fellow at Queen Mary University of London 1990–2012 and founder and Director of the Centre for the Study of Migration from 1994–2012. Her area of specialisation is migration – with particular focus on London – and she has acted as a consultant for radio and television. Her publications include: Uniting the Tailors: Trade Unionism amongst the Tailoring Workers of London and Leeds 1870–1939 (1995); Tradition and Change: A History of Reform Judaism in Britain 1840–1995 (1995); Strangers, Aliens and Asians: Huguenots, Jews and Bangladeshis in Spitalfields 1660–2000 (2005); and London the Promised Land Revisited (2015). Her latest book, jointly edited with Colin Holmes, is An East End Legacy. Essays in Memory of William J Fishman (2018). She is currently an Honorary Senior Research Fellow at Queen Mary and an Honorary Senior Research Associate at the Bartlett School of Architecture, University College London, and is a FRHS and a FRSA.

Janet Douglas was formerly Principal Lecturer in Politics at Leeds Beckett University in the Cultural Studies Department. Since her retirement, her research has largely focused on the history of her adopted home town of Leeds. She has lectured widely on a variety of subjects relating to the nineteenth- and twentieth-century city, and is the author of a number of publications, many concerned with Leeds architecture. Currently she is researching ‘Women and the Leeds Library’ for a volume which celebrates the 250th anniversary of the Library in 2018.

Amanda Bergen originally qualified as a solicitor. She completed her history masters degree at Leeds University. Her thesis on anti-Semitism and the Leeds Jewish community in the 1930s won the Marion Sharples Prize and was published by the Thoresby Society. She has since completed a PhD on Victorian social policy.

Ian Vellins studied at Oxford and graduated with a degree in Jurisprudence. He is a retired solicitor and immigration judge, who has done masters research degrees in Jewish history at both Manchester and Leeds. He has researched the impact of Kindertransport in Yorkshire and lectures frequently on Jewish history, particularly with reference to Jewish art treasures stolen by the Nazis.

Sharman Kadish was born in London and educated at University College London and St Antony’s College Oxford and at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. She has taught at the universities of London and Manchester and is the author of a number of books on Anglo-Jewish history and heritage, including companion architectural guides Jewish Heritage in England (first edition 2006) and Jewish Heritage in Gibraltar (2007). Her monograph, The Synagogues of Britain and Ireland: An Architectural and Social History (Yale University Press 2011), was short-listed for the American Society of Historians of British Art Prize in 2013. A new edition of her guidebook Jewish Heritage in Britain and Ireland was published in 2015 by Historic England. Having been active in Jewish Built Heritage Conservation for 30 years, she is currently a member of the Northern Buildings Committee of the Victorian Society, a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries of London as well as a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

Phil Goldstone has had a successful business career in international sales and is active in interfaith initiatives in Leeds. He has a masters degree from De Montford University in Sport and Society and is registered for a PhD in the history of sport in England.

Michael Meadowcroft is the former Liberal MP for Leeds West and is a frequent lecturer on the political history of Leeds. He was for many years the Chairman of the Leeds Library, whose holdings include important Leeds historical sources. Among his publications is an article on the political leadership in Leeds during the interwar years.

Irina Kudenko works as a Research and Evaluation Lead in the National STEM Learning Network at the University of York. She did her PhD in the geography department at Leeds University on the subject of Jewish identity within the Leeds Jewish community.