CONTRIBUTORS

David M. Anderson, formerly of Birkbeck College, University of London, is now Senior Lecturer in History at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London. He is co-editor of the Journal of African History and has edited (with Richard Grove) Conservation in Africa: people, policies and practice (Cambridge, 1987) and (with Douglas Johnson) The Ecology of Survival: case studies from northeast African history (London, 1988). He is working on a history of crime, prosecution and punishment in British Africa.

David Arnold is Professor in the History of South Asia at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He is author of Police Power and Colonial Rule: Madras, 1859–1947 (Delhi, 1986) and Famine (London, 1988) and editor of Imperial Medicine and Indigenous Societies (1988).

David Killingray is Reader in History at Goldsmiths' College, University of London. He is co-author (with Anthony Clayton) of Khaki and Blue: military and police in British colonial Africa (Athens, Ohio, 1989) and has edited (with Richard Rathbone) Africa and the Second World War (London, 1986). He is co-editor of African Affairs and working on a history of Africa during the First World War.

John McCracken is Senior Lecturer in History at Stirling University, and he has also taught in Africa at the University of Dar es Salaam and at Chancellor College, University of Malawi. He is author of Politics and Christianity in Malawi, 1875–1940 (Cambridge, 1977) and a contributor to The Cambridge History of Africa, Volume 7 (Cambridge, 1986). He is currently writing a new modern history of Malawi.

Richard Rathbone is Senior Lecturer in the Contemporary History of Africa at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. He has edited (with Shula Marks) Industrialisation and Social Change in South Africa (London, 1982); Africa and the Second World War (with David Killingray, London, 1986), and (with John Dunn and Donal Cruise O'Brien) Contemporary West African States (second edition, Cambridge, 1989). His current research focuses upon the reception and operation of colonial law in the Gold Coast.

Charles Smith studied as an undergraduate at the University of Keele. His doctorate, on British counter-insurgency in Palestine, was completed in 1990 for Cambridge University, where he was a member of Jesus College. He now works as a media researcher.

CONTRIBUTORS

Anthony Stockwell is Reader in Imperial and Commonwealth History at Royal Holloway and Bedford New Colleges, University of London. Among his recent publications are a two-volume set of documents on decolonisation (with A. N. Porter), British Imperial Policy and Decolonization, 1938–64 (London, 1987 and 1988). He is currently co-editor of the Journal of Imperial and Commonwealth History, and editing the Malayan volume in the British Documents on the End of Empire Project.

David Throup is Lecturer in Politics at the University of Keele. He has published Economic and Social Origins of Mau Mau 1945–53 (London, Nairobi and Athens, Ohio, 1987), along with many articles on the colonial history of Kenya. He is now researching the African policies of the Kennedy administration in the USA.

Charles Townshend is Professor of Modern History at the University of Keele. He is the author of The British Campaign in Ireland, 1919–21: the development of political and military policies (Oxford, 1974); Political violence in Ireland: government and resistance since 1848 (Oxford, 1983), and Britain's Civil Wars: counterinsurgency in the twentieth century (1986).