Notes on contributors

Laura Beers is a Birmingham Fellow at the University of Birmingham, specialising in modern British political history. She is the author of Your Britain: Media and the Making of the Labour Party (Harvard, 2010) and Red Ellen: The Life of Ellen Wilkinson, Socialist, Feminist, Internationalist (Harvard, 2016), and the co-editor, with Geraint Thomas, of Brave New World: Imperial and Democratic Nation-Building in Britain between the Wars (London, Institute of Historical Studies, 2012).

Clarisse Berthezène is a senior lecturer at the University of Paris Diderot. She is the author of Training Minds for the War of Ideas. Ashridge College, the Conservative Party and the Cultural Politics of Britain, 1929–1954 (Manchester University Press, 2015) which was awarded the PSA Group Prize 2016 for the best publication on conservative politics and the study of conservatism, and (with Jean-Christian Vinel) Postwar Conservatism, a Transnational investigation. Britain, France and the United States, 1930–1990 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2017). She is currently working on Conservative women, voluntary associations and local government, 1918–1951.

Adrian Bingham is Professor of Modern History at the University of Sheffield. He has written extensively on the national popular press in the decades after 1918, examining the ways in which newspapers both reflected and shaped attitudes to gender, sexuality and class. He is author of three books: Gender, Modernity and the Popular Press in Inter-War Britain (Oxford University Press, 2004), Family Newspapers? Sex, Private Life, and the British Popular Press 1918–1978 (Oxford University Press, 2009) and (with Martin Conboy), Tabloid Century: The Popular Press in Britain, 1896 to the Present (Peter Lang, 2015). He is currently working on a new project entitled 'Everyday Politics, Ordinary Lives: Democratic Engagement in Britain, 1918–1992'.

Rosie Campbell is Professor of Politics at Birkbeck University of London. She has recently written on parliamentary candidates, the politics of diversity and gender voting behaviour and political recruitment. She is the principal investigator of the ESRC-funded Representative Audit of Britain, which surveyed all candidates standing in the 2015 British general election, and co-investigator of a Leverhulme-funded study of British parliamentary candidates and MPs from 1945 to 2015 (www.parliamentarycandidates.org). She has co-authored reports on gender and political participation for BBC Radio Four's Woman's Hour, The Electoral Commission, The Fabian Women's Network and The Hansard Society. Rosie has recently been interviewed by the Today Programme, Westminster Hour, Woman's Hour, Newsnight and Good Morning Britain. Rosie presented two episodes of Radio Four's Analysis on How Voters Decide in February 2017 (www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b08ff18d).

Sarah Childs is Professor of Politics and Gender at the University of Bristol, UK. She has published widely on women's political representation. Her most recent research book, Sex, Gender and the Conservative Party: From Iron Lady to Kitten Heels, written with Paul Webb, was published by Palgrave in 2012. In 2015 she published two edited books Gender, Conservatism and Representation, and Deeds and Words with Celis and Campbell respectively, both in ECPR press. The publication of The Good Parliament Report in 2016 followed a secondment to the UK House of Commons (www.bristol.ac.uk/media-library/sites/news/2016/july/20%20Jul%20Prof%20Sarah%20Childs%20The%20Good%20Parliament%20report.pdf). This identifies the diversity insensitivities in the House and provides a comprehensive blueprint for reform.

Krista Cowman is Professor of History and Director of Research in the College of Arts, University of Lincoln. She has published widely on women and politics in twentieth-century Britain and is currently working on women's quotidian activism in post-war British cities.

Julie V. Gottlieb is a Reader in Modern History at the University of Sheffield. She has published extensively on the history of women and politics in Britain, including Feminine Fascism: Women in Britain's Fascist Movement, 1923–1945 (I. B. Tauris, 2000) and 'Guilty Women', Foreign Policy and Appeasement in Inter-war Britain (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015). She has also explored these and related themes on radio, television, in print media and as podcasts, and written blogs for various outlets including History Matters, the Huffington Post, and The Conversation. With Clarisse Berthezene and the Conservative Party Archive, she co-organised the conference upon which this volume is based in June 2015.

Matthew C. Hendley received his PhD in Modern British History from the University of Toronto. A full professor at the State University of New York College at Oneonta, he is the author of Organized Patriotism and the Crucible of War: Popular Imperialism in Britain, 1914–1932 (McGill-Queen's University Press, 2012), the co-editor of Imagining Globalization: Language, Identities and Boundaries (Palgrave Macmillan, 2009) and author of three chapters in edited book collections and five journal articles. His main published research interests are in popular imperialism and popular Conservatism in early twentieth-century Britain and their intersections with gender and culture.

Anne Jenkin has worked in and around the Conservative Party and the Westminster village for most of her life. In 2005 there were 17 Conservative women MPs (9 per cent of the Parliamentary Party) and she and Theresa May founded Women2Win, the campaign to get more Conservative women elected to Parliament. She became a Conservative member of the House of Lords in 2011. She founded the Conservative Friends of International Development and is active in various anti-waste campaigns. She has held various positions of responsibility, sat on select committees and is an officer of a number of All-Party Parliamentary Groups (APPGs), but her passion remains getting more women actively involved in public life.

Jeremy McIlwaine studied history at Ulster University before taking an MA in Archive Administration at Liverpool University between 1992 and 1993. After qualifying as an archivist in 1993, he worked primarily on local authority archives – including Hertfordshire Archives (1993–2001), the Corporation of London Record Office (2001–5) and London Metropolitan Archives (2005–6). Since May 2006 he has held the post of Conservative Party Archivist, based at the Bodleian Library in Oxford.

June Purvis is Emeritus Professor of Women's and Gender History at the University of Portsmouth. She has published widely on the history of women's education and on the suffragette movement in Edwardian Britain, including Emmeline Pankhurst: a Biography (Routledge, 2002). Two recent collections include Women's Activism: Global Perspectives from the 1890s to the Present (Routledge, 2013), co-edited with Francisca de Haan, Margaret Allen and Krassimira Daskalova and Connecting Women's Histories: the Local and the Global, Special Issue of Women's History Review, August 2016, co-edited with Barbara Bush. June is the Founding and Managing Editor of Women's History Review and the Editor for a Women's and Gender Book Series with Routledge. She is currently the Chair of Women's History Network and the Secretary and Treasurer of the International Federation for the History of Women.

David Thackeray is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Exeter. His first book Conservatism for the Democratic Age (2013) explored the Conservatives efforts to develop a mass party in the twentieth century. His current research explores the growth and decline of 'British World' trade networks between the 1900s and 1970s.

Richard Toye is Professor of Modern History at the University of Exeter. He is the author of three books on Winston Churchill, the most recent of which is The Roar of the Lion: The Untold Story of Churchill's World War II Speeches (Oxford University Press, 2013). Together with Julie V. Gottlieb, he edited The Aftermath of Suffrage: Women, Gender, and Politics in Britain, 1918–1945 (Palgrave Macmillan, 2013).

Diane Urquhart is a Reader in modern Irish history at the Institute of Irish Studies of the University of Liverpool. She is a graduate of Queen's University, Belfast and a former postdoctoral fellow of the Institute of Irish Studies at Queen's. She has published widely on women and political activism and legislative reform. She is the author of The Ladies of Londonderry: Women and Political Patronage, 1800–1959 (I. B. Tauris, 2008) and Women in Ulster Politics, 1890–1940: A History Not Yet Told (Irish Academic Press, 2007). She is the editor of The Papers of the Ulster Women's Unionist Council and Executive Committee, 1911–40 (Irish Manuscripts Commission, 2001) and co-editor of Irish Women at War: the Twentieth Century (Irish Academic Press, 2010); Irish Women's History (Irish Academic Press, 2004); The Irish Women's History Reader (Routledge, 2000) and Coming into the Light: The Work, Politics and Religion of Women in Ulster, 1840–1940 (Institute of Irish Studies, 1994). Diane is currently completing a history of Irish divorce.
