Acknowledgements

We are grateful to a number of individuals and institutions for supporting the conference and the broader research project that has developed into this volume. First and foremost, the Conservatives and Conservatism Group of the Political Studies Association, then under the leadership of Dr Richard Hayton, made a significant financial and organisational contribution to the conference, facilitating the coming together of historians, political scientists, political sociologists and politicians. The conference 'Rethinking Right-Wing Women: Gender, Women and the Conservative Party, 1880s to the Present', took place at the Conservative Party Archive at the Bodleian, Oxford, in June 2015. The Chief Archivist of the CPA, Jeremy McIlwaine, was the most attentive host and co-organiser, and we couldn't have had a better setting than the new Weston Library. A number of others were most generous with their time and offered various insights into the archiving of vital material – past, present, and for the future – especially Stephen Parkinson, Professor Stuart Ball, and Ann Baroness Jenkins. Our respective universities, the University of Sheffield and Paris-Diderot (SPC)/LARCA UMR 8225, have provided us with financial support, helped with publicity, and offered much encouragement. The University of Sheffield's Arts Enterprise Scheme funded a research assistant and conference administrator, Dr David Swift. Additional support was provided by the Royal Historical Society and the Maison Française d'Oxford. The editorial team at Manchester University Press have been friendly, efficient, highly professional, and consistently helpful. Both our editor, Tony Mason, and the series editor, Richard Hayton, have provided much appreciated support from the outset.

We would also like to thank the contributors to this volume for their efforts and for engaging so thoughtfully with the themes and mission of the project. Further, we thank the authors for adjusting some of their initial conclusions with great alacrity yet all the while with unfailing intellectual rigour in light of the dramatic remapping of the political landscape in the UK at just the time when we were preparing our chapters. These have been dramatic changes that could not have been more resonant and pertinent to the story of women in the Conservative Party and the place of gender in conservative political culture.

The editors would also like to thank their families for their support, patience and forbearance.

Clarisse Berthezene and Julie V. Gottlieb, 2017