Notes on contributors

Steven Bruhm is Robert and Ruth Lumsden Professor of English at the University of Western Ontario, London, Canada. He is the author of Gothic Bodies: The Politics of Pain in Romantic Fiction (1994) and Reflecting Narcissus: A Queer Aesthetic (2000), as well as authoring numerous articles on Gothicism and queerness. He is co-editor, with Natasha Hurley, of Curiouser: On the Queerness of Children (2004), and is currently at work on a project entitled 'Only the Dead Can Dance: Choreographies of Mortality'.

William Hughes is Professor of Gothic Studies at Bath Spa University. He is the author of Beyond Dracula: Bram Stoker's Fiction and Its Cultural Context (2000) and, with Richard Dalby, the co-compiler of Bram Stoker: A Bibliography (2004). He is editor of Gothic Studies, the refereed journal of the International Gothic Association and, with Andrew Smith, has co-edited Bram Stoker: History, Psychoanalysis and the Gothic (1998); Empire and the Gothic: The Politics of Genre (2003) and Fictions of Unease: The Gothic from Otranto to The X-Files (with Andrew Smith and Diane Mason, 2002).

Royce Mahawatte holds degrees from the universities of London, Oxford and East Anglia. He is an Associate Lecturer in the Department of Cultural and Historical Studies at the University of the Arts, London, and is preparing a monograph on George Eliot and the Gothic.

Diane Mason is a freelance writer and occasional lecturer in English Literature at Bath Spa University, where she researched her PhD on Victorian fiction and medical culture. She is the author of The Secret Vice: Masturbation in Victorian Fiction and Medical Culture (Manchester University Press, 2008) and co-editor of Fictions of Unease: The Gothic from Otranto to The X-Files (2002). She has recently co-edited a new scholarly edition of Dracula (2007) and has contributed articles to journals including Gothic Studies and Women's Writing.

Paulina Palmer was, before retiring, senior lecturer in the English Department at Warwick University and taught on the Women's Studies MA. She now teaches part-time for the Gender Studies MA at Birkbeck, University of London.

Her publications include: Contemporary Women's Fiction: Narrative Practice and Feminist Theory (1989); Contemporary Lesbian Writing: Dreams, Desire, Difference (1993); and Lesbian Gothic: Transgressive Fictions (1999). She is currently working on a book entitled The Queer Uncanny.

Mair Rigby is an Associate Tutor in English Literature at Cardiff University. Her PhD thesis explored the extent to which queer theory and Gothic fiction can be considered mutually illuminating fields of academic inquiry, focusing particularly on Mary Shelley and her novel Frankenstein. She has published an essay on John Polidori in Romanticism on the Net and has an essay discussing female desire in Frankenstein forthcoming in an edited collection.

Andrew Smith is Professor of English Studies at the University of Glamorgan where he is Co-Director of the Research Centre for Literature, Arts and Science (RCLAS). He is the author of the Edinburgh Critical Guide to Gothic Literature (2007); Victorian Demons: Medicine, Masculinity and the Gothic at the Fin de Siècle (2004) and Gothic Radicalism: Literature, Philosophy and Psychoanalysis in the Nineteenth Century (2000). He has co-edited eight volumes of essays. He is the co-series editor of Gothic Literary Studies, and Gothic Authors: Critical Revisions, published by the University of Wales Press.

Ardel Thomas is currently the Chair of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender Studies at the City College of San Francisco. She received her PhD in Modern Thought and Literature from Stanford University with a concentration in nineteenth century queer Gothic horror. Her publications include Writing for Real: A Handbook for Writers in Community Service (2003) co-authored with Carolyn Ross. She has published widely on the Gothic and is currently writing a book on queer Victorian Gothic horror for the University of Wales Press.

Dale Townshend is a Lecturer in English Studies at the University of Stirling, where he teaches on the MLitt in The Gothic Imagination. His publications include The Orders of Gothic: Foucault, Lacan, and the Subject of Gothic Writing, 1764-1820 (2007); Gothic: Critical Concepts in Literary and Cultural Studies (2004), co-edited with Fred Botting, and Gothic Shakespeares (2008), co-edited with John Drakakis. He is currently at work on a project on suicide in Romantic-era writing.

Gina Wisker is a Professor and Head of the Centre for Teaching and Learning at Brighton University. She has published widely on pedagogic issues and literary topics. Her most recent books include Key Concepts in Postcolonial Fiction (2007); The Postgraduate Research Handbook (second edition, 2007); Horror Fiction (2005); and Postcolonial and African American Women's Writing (2000). She is the editor of Dissections: The Journal of Contemporary Horror.