Acknowledgements

I would like to thank the International Association of Word and Image Studies (IAWIS/AIERTI) for generously supporting this project in its early stages, and the Faculty of Arts, Cultures and Education at the University of Hull for subsequent financial help. I am very grateful to Matthew Frost and the team at Manchester University Press for recognizing the book's potential early on, steering it through the production process, and transforming the manuscript into such a handsome material object. We would like to extend our thanks to the various individuals and institutions who gave permission to reproduce the images contained in the book. Many thanks to the anonymous readers at the Press for their detailed, generous and helpful reports, which helped us to sharpen the book's focus and bring out its wider significance. I am also very grateful to my partner, Jane Rickard, for her advice and encouragement. Finally I would like to thank our excellent team of contributors for their hard work and patience, and for making this project a collegial and stimulating scholarly encounter from the outset.

I would also like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to my co-editor, David Kennedy, who sadly passed away in March 2017, shortly after we sent a draft of the manuscript to the Press. While I am pleased that the book is finally completed I am very sorry that David is not around to see the finished product. This project grew out of our shared interest in the relationship between visual and verbal art, and indeed many of the chapters below build on David's particular interest in ekphrasis as an encounter. David was an ekphrastic poet as well as an insightful critic, and it was a particular pleasure for me to hear him read from his collection The Apple and the Mountain before he died. He is much missed at the University of Hull as a friend and colleague, and I would like to dedicate this book to his memory. I hope that it will serve as a testament to his scholarship, creativity, and personality.
