ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Witness onstage is the result of research conducted between 2010 and 2019 during which time I benefited from the input, assistance, and guidance of more people than I am able to thank here. Above all, I must express my gratitude to the artists whose work is at the centre of this book and, in particular, Elena Gremina and Mikhail Ugarov. Neither this research nor the community of artists at the heart of its analysis would have been possible without the commitment and brilliance of these two visionary artists. Thank you, Elena Anatolevna and Mikhail Iurevich, for your kindness, your courage, and your unimaginable devotion to the craft. You will be forever missed.

I would also like to thank the many scholars and academic colleagues who have helped me to develop this work. First and foremost Emma Widdis – to Emma, I offer my sincerest appreciation for your intellectual generosity throughout this process. I am additionally grateful to Nancy Condee, Julie Curtis, Julie Fedor, Alexander Etkind, Anna Hartnell, Olesya Khromeychuk, Susan Larsen, Mark Lipovetsky, Chris Megson, Helen Nicholson, Louise Owen, Rachel Polonsky, Rebecca Reich, Ellen Rutten, Raisa Sidenova, Laurence Senelick, and Boris Wolfson. Your insights and advice have played a crucial role in the development of this research.

Some sections of this book have been published before in earlier versions as articles. Parts of Chapter 3 were published as ‘The Trial that Never Was: Russian documentary theatre and the pursuit of justice’ in New Theatre Quarterly, 30/4, 307–17 (2014); and segments of Chapter 5 were previously published as ‘Show Us Your Papers: Performing post-Soviet national identity in Talgat Batalov’s “Uzbek”’ in Problems of Post-Communism, 63/1, 16–26 (2016). I thank these journals’ editors for permission to include these materials here. Likewise I am grateful to the editors and reviewers of Manchester University Press for their support in the final stages of this project, in particular the book’s commissioning editor Matthew Frost and copy-editor Juanita Bullough.

Special mention is due to the artists, critics, and theatre professionals who have kindly shared with me the archival material that informs every aspect of this book: Anna Banasiukevich, Talgat Batalov, Nina Belenitskaia, Ekaterina Bondarenko, Polina Borodina, John Freedman, Georg Genoux, Mikhail Kaluzhskii, Oleg Karlson, Viktoria Kholodova, Maksym Kurochkin, Maria Kroupnik, Elena Margo, Anastasiia Patlai, Pavel Rudnev, and Zarema Zaudinova.

Alongside those people who were essential to this research are my friends who encouraged, inspired, and challenged me throughout all the turns life has taken in these years: Hallimeda Allinson, Nicole Burgund, Michelle Carriger, Stephen Haley, Damon Jespersen, Inessa Keilbach, Maria Punina, Louise Robertson, John Sherry, Edward Speck, Lawrence Templeton, Paul Wann, Bonnie Jean Wilbur, and Alex Vukovitsch. Most of all, however, I must thank Tom Rowley, for his honest, critical, and insightful perspective on the work and its value from the start to the finish of this project.

Lastly, I would like to express my deepest gratitude to my sisters Anna and Mara for their love and inspiration, their children Aurora, Max, and Mae for the joy they bring to my life, and, finally my parents Judith Kamber and Dennis Flynn. I cannot thank you enough for your unerring faith in my ability to do this work and for helping me learn how to believe.
