Notes on contributors

David Brown is Archival Discovery lead for the Beyond 2022 Project, Trinity College Dublin. His monograph, Empire and Enterprise: Money, power and the Adventure for Irish Land, 1642–1660, will be published by Manchester University Press in 2020. He previously worked on the Down Survey of Ireland project, under Micheál Ó Siochrú, and is co-editor of a five-volume scholarly edition of the Books of Survey and Distribution for the Irish Manuscripts Commission.

Eamon Darcy teaches at Maynooth University. His publications include The Irish Rebellion of 1641 and the Wars of the Three Kingdoms (Woodbridge, Suffolk, 2013) and The World of Thomas Ward: sex and scandal in late seventeenth-century Co Antrim (Dublin, 2016).

Coleman A. Dennehy is a legal historian who has taught at University College Dublin and University College London (as IRC Marie Skłodowska-Curie Fellow), and at the University of Limerick. His monograph, a legal and administrative history of The Irish Parliament, 1613–89: the evolution of a colonial institution, was published by Manchester University Press in 2019.

Aoife Duignan is Student Complaints Officer at University College Dublin. Her doctoral thesis was a study of politics and war in Connacht during the 1640s. She has contributed chapters to Robert Armstrong and Tadhg Ó hAnnracháin (eds), Communities in Early Modern Ireland (Dublin, 2006) and David Edwards and Simon Egan (eds), The Scots in Early Stuart Ireland (Manchester, 2016).

David Edwards is Senior Lecturer in History at University College Cork, and was Principal Investigator of the Irish Research Council Senior Collaborative project ‘The Colonial landscapes of Richard Boyle, 1st Earl of Cork, c.1602–1643’. He is the author of The Ormond Lordship in County Kilkenny, 1515–1642 (Dublin, 2003), and joint-editor of Age of Atrocity:
violence and political conflict in early modern Ireland (Dublin, 2007) and The Colonial World of Richard Boyle, first earl of Cork (Dublin, 2018).

Kevin Forkan is Head of Archives and Library at M+, the new museum for visual culture in Hong Kong. He previously held research positions at NUI Galway and Trinity College Dublin, working under Nicholas Canny and Jane Ohlmeyer, and his publications include ‘The Ulster Scots and the Engagement, 1647–8’, Irish Historical Studies 35 (2007), and ‘Ormond’s alternative: the lord-lieutenant’s secret contacts with Protestant Ulster, 1645–6’, Historical Research 81 (2008).

Patrick Little is a Senior Research Fellow at the History of Parliament Trust in London. He is the author of Lord Broghill and the Cromwellian Union with Ireland and Scotland (Woodbridge, Suffolk, 2004) and a number of articles on Ireland in the 1640s and 1650s.

Bríd McGrath is Adjunct Assistant Professor in the Department of History, Trinity College Dublin, where she teaches palaeography. She has edited the Minute Book of the Corporation of Clonmel, 1608–1649 (Dublin, 2006) and Acts of the Corporation of Coleraine, 1623–1669 (Dublin, 2017), and has published a large number of articles and papers on early modern Irish parliaments and towns.

John Morrill FBA, HonMRIA is Emeritus Professor of British and Irish History at the University of Cambridge and a Life Fellow of Selwyn College. His 130 publications include fifteen books and essays on the life and thought of Oliver Cromwell and he is the general editor of a five-volume edition of Oliver Cromwell’s letters, speeches and writings, to be published by Oxford University Press.

Andrew Robinson works as a researcher in the public sector in relation to policing and criminal justice in Northern Ireland. He completed his PhD entitled “Not otherwise worthy to be named, but as a firebrand brought from Ireland to inflame this Kingdom”: the political and cultural milieu of Sir John Clotworthy during the Stuart Civil Wars’ at Ulster University in 2013, and has subsequently published articles on Clotworthy, Owen O’Connolly and the 1641 Rising in Co. Monaghan.