Notes on contributors

Anne C. Aldis is Director of the Conflict Studies Research Centre, UK Defence Academy. Her work focuses on international security, conflict resolution and defence diplomacy, primarily in southern and eastern Europe, the Caucasus and Central Asia. She has recently published (with Graeme Herd) Soft Security Threats and European Security (Routledge, 2005) and The Ideological War on Terror (Routledge, 2006); and, with Roger McDermott, Russian Military Reform 1992–2002 (Frank Cass, 2003).

David Brown is a Senior Lecturer in Defence and International Affairs at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. His main research interests are in terrorism and European internal security and police co-operation. His recent articles include: 'Defending the fortress: assessing the European Union's response to trafficking', European Security (2004) and 'NATO and terrorism', Contemporary Security Policy (2005). He is currently finalising his monograph on the EU's contribution to counter-terrorism, Unsteady Foundations? The European Union's Counter-Terrorist Strategy 1991–2006 (Manchester University Press, 2007).

Tracey C. German is a Lecturer in Defence Studies at the Joint Services Command and Staff College, King's College London. Her current research interests are the impact of the on-going Chechen conflict, security in the Caucasus region and energy issues in the former Soviet states. Her recent publications include: Russia's Chechen War (Routledge, 2003); 'Post-Soviet security politics', in Security Dynamics in the Former Soviet Bloc: Integration or Isolation? (Routledge, 2003); and 'The Pankiski Gorge: Georgia's Achilles' heel in its relations with Russia?', Central Asian Survey (March 2004).

Graeme P. Herd is a resident Faculty Member at the Geneva Centre for Security Policy and an Associate Fellow of Chatham House, London. He has published an extensive range of articles on contemporary European security politics. His latest books include Soft Security Threats and European Security (Routledge, 2005), co-edited with Anne Aldis and Divided West: European Security and Transatlantic Relations (Chatham House, 2006), co-authored with Tuomas Forsberg.

Paul Holtom is a researcher in SIPRI's Arms Transfer Project. Prior to this he was a research fellow at the Centre for Border Studies, the University of Glamorgan. His research on control regimes on SALW and measures to combat arms trafficking in the Baltic States, Poland and Russia – Arms Transit Trade in the Baltic Region – was published in 2003 in collaboration with the INGO Saferworld. He has recently completed a small arms survey of Albania, Turning the Page: Small Arms and Light Weapons in Albania (Saferworld, 2005).

Karim A.A. Khan is a member of 2 Hare Court, Temple and specialises in international criminal and human rights law. He has worked on the UN International Criminal Tribunals for the Former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, the Special Courts in East Timor and Sierra Leone and provided legal advice to the ICJ. He is also a Senior Research Fellow, King's College, London. Recently, he has co-authored (with Rodney Dixon) Archbold International Criminal Courts (Sweet and Maxwell, 2005) and co-edited International Criminal Law Reports (ICLR) and International Criminal Evidence (Cameron May, 2006).

Anna Kotzeva is a barrister at 1 Temple Gardens, London and is currently working as a legal officer in the Office of the Prosecutor of the ICTY. She has substantial experience in the ECHR and has advised the Home Office 'in house' in relation to treaty obligations and implementation issues. In addition to a number of articles in the Solicitors Journal, she is the co-author (with Robin Tam) of the Asylum and Human Rights Appeals Handbook (Oxford University Press, 2006).

Jörg Monar holds the Marie Curie Chair of Excellence and is Director of the SECURINT project at Université Robert Schuman of Strasbourg. He is also specialist adviser to the House of Lords EU Committee and has acted as consultant to the European Parliament and to a number of European governments. He has published over 170 books, articles and chapters on the political, institutional and legal development of the EU. His research focus is on EU governance and treaty reform, external relations and justice and home affairs.

Roderick Pace is a Lecturer in International Relations and European Studies, Director of the European Documentation and Research Centre (EDRC) and a member of the Islands and Small States Institute (ISSI) of the University of Malta. He was involved in Malta's EU accession process. His research interests include theories of European integration, Euro-Mediterranean studies and small states in international affairs. He has published numerous articles on these themes. He is also the author of Microstate Security in the Global System: EU–Malta Relations (Midsea Books, 2001).

Bill Park is a Senior Lecturer in Defence Studies at the Joint Services Command and Staff College, King's College, London. His current research interest is primarily Turkish foreign and security policy. He has given evidence to both House of Lords and House of Commons Select Committees on Turkey. He has published widely on NATO and Turkish foreign and security policy, including Defending the West: A History of NATO (Wheatsheaf, 1986); Rethinking Security in Post-Cold War Europe (Longmans, 1998) with Wyn Rees; and a number of articles on Turkey's foreign and security policy.

Dmitry Polikanov is Director of International Relations at the All-Russia Public Opinion Research Center (VCIOM). He has worked as Research Fellow and Deputy Director in the PIR Center for Policy Studies and as Communications Adviser for the Moscow delegation of the ICRC. Author of over 70 publications on international affairs, Russian foreign and domestic policy, he also lectures at the NATO School, the Moscow Party School and the School of Public Politics in Russia.

Rosaria Puglisi is Political Advisor to the EU Special Representative for Moldova. In the period 2003–05, she was Political Officer at the Delegation of the European Commission to Ukraine, having previously worked as a research Fellow in post-Soviet politics at the University of Leeds. She is author of Economic Elites and Russian–Ukraine Relations (Routledge, 2005); 'The rise of the Ukrainian oligarchs', Democratization (2003) and 'Clashing agendas? Economic Interests, elite coalitions and prospects for cooperation between Russia and Ukraine', Europe–Asia Studies (2003).

Alistair J.K. Shepherd is a Lecturer in Contemporary European Security in the Department of International Politics, University of Wales, Aberystwyth. His central research areas are European security and transatlantic relations. He has written a number of articles on the emergence of a military capability for the EU, including 'Irrelevant or indispensable? ESDP, the "War on Terror" and the fallout from Iraq', International Politics (2006). He is also co-author (with Trevor Salmon) of Towards a European Army: A Military Power in the Making? (Lynne Rienner, 2003).

.....

Martin A. Smith is a Senior Lecturer in Defence and International Affairs at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. His main research interests are in the areas of international and European security, with a particular focus on the post-Cold War evolution of NATO. His most recent book, Russia and NATO since 1991, was published by Routledge in December 2005. He is currently working on a book addressing the nature and distribution of power in the post-Cold War world. This will be published by Polity Press in 2007.

Anthony Welch was a Brigadier in the British Army. Subsequently, he worked for the UN as Chef de Cabinet to the Special Representative of the Secretary General for the former Yugoslavia and then as Conflict and Security Advisor for the UK's Department for International Development (DFID). In 1999, he was appointed Head of the DFID Office in Kosovo and later became the UN Regional Administrator, Mitrovica. Currently, he is in Kosovo as the Coordinator of the Internal Security Sector Review, prior to decisions on the final status of the province.