Acknowledgements

We are most grateful for the assistance we have received from the many elected and unelected officials in Greater Manchester and the Liverpool City Region whom we interviewed at length both in person and virtually. It is unfair to discriminate in our thanks but we must mention the time given to us by Mayors Andy Burnham and Steve Rotheram, plus many leading councillors such as Sir Richard Leese in Manchester and Liam Robinson in Liverpool. We also spoke to many others involved in a range of organisations, including the Local Enterprise Partnerships and Peel Holdings and many others which are listed elsewhere in the book. We were particularly inspired by the aptly named Inspire Women’s Group in Oldham.

We used extensive documentation in the libraries at the University of Huddersfield and the Open University and at the Manchester Central Library. We were generously received at council meetings and other public events in the two city-regions, which were highly informative. For a period in 2017, Dr Neil Pye supported us in our research by his participant observation in the first metro-mayoral elections. The University of Huddersfield also enabled Professor Blakeley to work on the book despite her full-time role there as Associate Dean Teaching and Learning and gave some financial support to Professor Evans who worked on the project during his retirement. Our thanks are also due to academic institutions who invited us to share some preliminary findings at seminars, in chapters and through blogs such as the University of Sheffield’s Political and Economic Research Institute and Birmingham City University. Rob Byron and Alun Richards at Manchester University Press also guided us encouragingly so that we were able to complete the book. Finally, we would like to pay special tribute to the late Professor Mick Moran, formerly at the University of Manchester, who encouraged us and with whom we had the privilege to discuss our plans.

Finally, we are grateful to our families for having to share their time with the considerable attention that we have devoted to the two great northern city-regions of Manchester and Liverpool and their people.