

Contents

List of figures and tables	page vii
List of contributors	viii
Foreword – Chi Onwurah MP, Chair, All-Party Parliamentary Group for Africa	x
Acknowledgements	xii
List of abbreviations	xiii

Introduction: UK Africa policy in the twenty-first century: business as usual? – Danielle Beswick, Jonathan Fisher and Stephen R. Hurt	1
--	---

Part I: Africa in UK international relations: trade, aid, development and security

1 The evolution of UK policy to Sub-Saharan Africa, 1997–2019 – Alex Vines	15
2 Africa's trade with Brexit Britain: neo-colonialism encounters regionalism? – Mark Langan	35
3 The UK and Africa relations: construction of the African Union's peace and security structures – Kasaija Phillip Apuuli	54
4 The securitisation of UK aid and DFID programmes in Africa: a comparative case study of Cameroon, Central African Republic, Ethiopia, Kenya and Uganda – Ivica Petrikova and Melita Lazell	73
5 The UK and peacekeeping operations on the African continent – David Curran	99

Part II: Africa and UK actors: parties, publics and civil society

6 Rehabilitating the 'nasty party'? The Conservative Party and Africa from opposition to government – Danielle Beswick	121
7 Labour, international development and Africa: policy rethinking in opposition – William Brown	139

8	The mixed fortunes of African development campaigning under austerity and the Conservatives – Graham Harrison	161
9	British campaigns for African development: the Trade Justice Movement – Stephen R. Hurt	179
10	International development NGOs, representations in fundraising appeals and public attitudes in UK–Africa relations – Danielle Beswick, Niheer Dasandi, David Hudson and Jennifer vanHeerde-Hudson	196
	Conclusions: aspects of continuity and change after New Labour – Danielle Beswick, Jonathan Fisher and Stephen R. Hurt	214
	Index	223