Acknowledgements

This book owes its beginnings to Neil Keeble and its ending to Julian Lethbridge, who kindly helped with its final preparation. Colleagues in The International Sidney Society, The Spenser Society, The Society for Renaissance Studies and The International Society for the History of Rhetoric have commented on many of the issues, raised in conference presentations. Their assistance has shaped this study into what, I hope, they and their students will find a novel and rewarding approach to a complex body of work.

Of the many librarians who have assisted me, those on whom I have most frequently called are in the National Library of Scotland, and the universities of Dundee, St Andrews, Edinburgh and Manchester. I am grateful to the University of California Press and the Renaissance English Text Society for permission to quote from their publications. The Carnegie Trust for the Universities of Scotland provided a research grant and the University of Dundee research leave.

Work on this project spans four decades. Those who encouraged it and have now departed include, in alphabetical order, Ephim Fogel, Charles Levy, John Norton-Smith, William Ringler, Jean Robertson and Gerald Rubio. I owe special thanks for their help and support to Gavin Alexander, Ronald Asher, Joseph Black, Jean Brink, Arthur Kinney, Roger Kuin, Mary Ellen Lamb, James Stewart and Robert Stillman, as well as the readers for the Manchester University Press. Those who have contributed in many ways include Christine Backler, Iain Barclay, Paul Hegarty, Shirley Hill, Jeanette Hunter, Lorraine Jones, Preethi Kay, Andy McMahon, Christine Pinder, Robin Rae and Gavin Skretkowicz.

During preparation of this work, my wife Carole endured Sidney's New Arcadia, Nightingale's Notes on Nursing, the Dictionary of the Older Scottish Tongue and the Internet Dictionary of the Scots Language. I have depended throughout on her devotion and sound advice. She is the true heroine of European erotic romance.

Victor Skretkowicz
University of Dundee

Victor Skretkowicz died when his book was in production. He did, however, revise the complex MS twice, once in response to reader reports and again because of his own dissatisfactions. Apart from the robust revisions and sharp-eyed proof reading, Victor carried on a rewarding and very full email correspondence with me. Latterly, due to the severe conditions of his illness, he could communicate only via computer. The inspiration I take from him cannot be fully expressed. Never did he relax his standards, only under pressure did he allow others to help with bibliography and indices. Any errors that remain are mine.
