Notes on contributors

Daniel Cadman is a Lecturer in English Literature at Sheffield Hallam University and editor of Early Modern Literary Studies. His previous publications include Sovereigns and Subjects in Early Modern Neo-Senecan Drama (Routledge, 2015).

Annaliese Connolly is a Senior Lecturer in English Literature at Sheffield Hallam University. Recent publications include Richard III: A Critical Reader (Bloomsbury, 2013) and Essex: The Cultural Impact of an Elizabethan Courtier (Manchester University Press, 2013) edited with Lisa Hopkins. Her current project is a monograph on George Peele.

John E. Curran, Jr is Professor of English at Marquette University and editor of the journal Renascence: Essays on Values in Literature. His most recent book is Character and Individual Personality in English Renaissance Drama (University of Delaware Press, 2014).

Sarah Dewar-Watson is a Lecturer in English at Mount St Mary's College in Derbyshire and an Honorary Research Fellow at the University of Sheffield. Her publications include Tragedy: A Reader's Guide to Essential Criticism (Palgrave, 2014).

Derek Dunne is a Lecturer in English Literature at Cardiff University. His publications include Shakespeare, Revenge Tragedy, and Early Modern Law: Vindictive Justice (Palgrave, 2016) and articles on the mathematics of revenge, the forensics of the blush and the early modern jury.

Andrew Duxfield is a Lecturer in English at the University of Liverpool. His publications include Christopher Marlowe and the Failure to Unify (Ashgate, 2015). In 2009 he won the Calvin G. and Rose Hoffman Prize for Distinguished Publication on Christopher Marlowe.

Jessica Dyson is a Senior Lecturer in English Literature at the University of Portsmouth. Her publications include Staging Authority in Caroline England: Prerogative, Law and Order in Drama 1625–1642 (Ashgate, 2013), and ‘The Politics of Love: The Broken Heart in the Caroline Context’ in a Special Issue of Early Modern Literary Studies on Readings of Love and Death (2015), which she co-edited.

Paul Frazer is a Senior Lecturer of Early Modern Literature at Northumbria University, Newcastle upon Tyne. He has published elsewhere on plays by Thomas Dekker, William Shakespeare and Christopher Marlowe. He also co-edited and contributed to the Arden Early Modern Drama Guide to The White Devil (Bloomsbury, 2016) and is co-editing a critical edition of Gorboduc and Other Political Texts for Manchester Revels.

Lisa Hopkins is Professor of English at Sheffield Hallam University and co-editor of Shakespeare, the journal of the British Shakespeare Association. Her most recent publications are From the Romans to the Normans on the English Renaissance Stage (Medieval Institute Publications, 2017) and Shakespearean Allusion in Crime Fiction: DCI Shakespeare (Palgrave, 2016).

Gemma Leggott was awarded a PhD from Sheffield Hallam University in 2017 for a thesis entitled ‘A Critical Edition of The Miseries of Enforced Marriage’. This is her first publication.

Domenico Lovascio is Ricercatore of English Literature at Università degli Studi di Genova. His publications include the first English–Italian edition of Jonson’s Catiline (ECIG, 2011) and Un nome, mille volti: Giulio Cesare nel teatro inglese della prima età moderna (Carocci, 2015), winner of the National Literary Award ‘Scriviamo Insieme’ and the Special Jury Prize at the National Literary Award ‘Franz Kafka Italia’.

Alisa Manninen received her PhD from the University of Tampere, Finland, where she taught English literature as a lecturer. Her publications include Royal Power and Authority in Shakespeare’s Late Tragedies (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2015).

Gabriel A. Rieger is an Associate Professor of Medieval and Renaissance English Literature at Concord University in Athens, West Virginia. His publications include Sex and Satiric Tragedy in Early Modern Literature: Penetrating Wit (Ashgate, 2009) and articles in various journals.