Acknowledgements

I would like to thank the Members of the European Parliament who agreed to be interviewed by me for the purposes of researching this book. I am also grateful to Jonathan de Peyer, Robert Byron and Tony Mason at Manchester University Press, and Richard Hayton, University of Leeds, for all their guidance and support with the process of preparing and finishing the manuscript, along with the anonymous reviewers. I have presented papers on the European Conservatives and Reformists at academic conferences and research seminars in Cork, Hull, Philadelphia, Glasgow, Kraków and Manchester, and received very useful feedback and views in the process. Thanks as well to my department and faculty at Lancaster University for providing me with funding to make research visits to Brussels and Strasbourg related to the European Union, and for generally providing a creative place to teach and research EU politics. Finally, I am grateful to Taylor & Francis for allowing me to reproduce material from my 2016 article in the journal Representation, 52(1), and to both the European Conservatives and Reformists and Polish Parliament for the reproduction of the photographs contained in Chapter 5.
