This book attempts to elaborate some of the ideas initially sketched in The Critique of Instrumental Reason from Weber to Habermas and Critical Theory in the Twenty-First Century. If it manages to open up some new directions in critical theory, it is undoubtedly due the help provided by students, colleagues, and friends. Many thanks to the students and faculty of the Social & Political Thought (SPT) programme at the University of Sussex, especially Jonathan Bailey, Michael Baines, Nic Baxter, David Berry, Mojo Blyth Piper, Sean Brown, Tim Carter, Denis Chevrier-Bosseau, Andrew Chitty, Martin Davey, Gerard Delanty, Alex Elliott, Beatrice Fazi, Chris Ferguson, Lucy Finchett-Maddock, Gordon Finlayson, David Gonsalves, Alasdair Gray, Nadine Hafez, Neal Harris, James Kelly, Dimitri Kladiskakis, Peter Kolarz, Valentinos Kontoyiannis, Alinafe Luka, Xuran Ma, Iain McDaniel, Karim Mohammadi, Tom Nathan, Jack O'Connor, Max O'Donnell Savage, Faure Perez, Umut Sahverdi, James Stockman, Paul James Williams, and especially to Joseph Backhouse-Barber and Val Whittington.

I have had fantastic support from colleagues in the School of History, Art History, and Philosophy at Sussex, including Liz James, Claire Langhamer, Ambra Moroncini, Vicky Phillips, Paige Thompson, Clive Webb, Gerhard Wolf, and Kim Wünschmann. Very special thanks to Lisa Brown, Jake Norris, and Gerardo Serra.

Exchanges with colleagues at other universities have had a decisive influence on the pages that follow. I've learned a great deal from discussions with Francesco Bilancia, Arianna Bove, Hauke Brunkhorst, Sarah Bufkin, Colin Crouch, Raul Digon Martin, Heiko Feldner, Alessandro Ferrara, Andreas Fischer-Lescano, Kevin Gray, Angelos Koutsourakis, David McGrogan, Lois McNay, Dirk Michel-Schertges, Kolja Möller, Marius Ostrowski, Jaroslav Skupnik, Marcel Stoetzler, Wolfgang Streeck, Fabio Vighi, Jackie Wang, Patrick Wheatley, and Chris Wyatt.

I am particularly indebted to Alberto Febbrajo, Regina Kreide, Ana Marinopoulou, William Outhwaite, Andreas Philippopoulos-Mihalopoulos, Heinz Süner, Gunther Teubner, and, as ever, to Chris Thornhill.

Friends have challenged lazy thinking on my part and made me re-think crucial issues. I've received particularly valuable insight from Fernand Avila, Ed Cangialosi, Costantino Ciervo, Richard Jemmett, Volker Lorek, Chris Malcolm, Mand Ryaira, Jarret Schecter, Imke Schmincke, and Cristiana Vitali.

Working together with Alun Richards and Caroline Wintersgill on the Critical Theory and Contemporary Society series has been easy and enjoyable. They consistently combine the light touch with clear direction in ways that will enable the series to grow in the future.

Although there is probably too much speculation in this book, I can say for a fact that neither this one nor the others would have been possible without Diana Göbel and Luca Lavatori.
