Acknowledgements

The idea for this book was conceived some considerable time ago. Tony Mason, from Manchester University Press, reacted enthusiastically to our initial idea and was encouraging throughout the whole process of writing and editing. We want to thank him for his unfaltering support and understanding. Special thanks go to our copy-editor, Graeme Leonard, who worked efficiently and reliably, and who kept calm at a critical moment.

We also want to thank all the contributors to this book – for their enthusiasm for the project and for the quality of their chapters. This made the process of editing itself a lively intellectual conversation.

Arthur Aughey gratefully acknowledges the support of a Leverhulme Trust Major Research Fellowship which he held during the writing of this book. He would also like to thank Dr Julia Stapleton for her intellectual support, and Sky Aughey and Sharon Glenn for sharing conversations about and journeys in England. The encouragement of the Social Science Research Institute at the University of Ulster, in particular its Director Dr Cathy Gormley-Heenan, is also greatly appreciated.

Christine Berberich would like to thank former colleagues at the University of Derby and present colleagues at the University of Portsmouth for intellectual support and good cheer. Gerdi Berberich provided invaluable practical help throughout the project and Lucas Finnegan Stefanuti offered timely reminders that there are things other than work.
