ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The idea for this volume, and several of its chapters, emerged out of a workshop organised by The Bible and Antiquity in Nineteenth-Century Culture, an interdisciplinary research project funded by the European Research Council (ERC) and hosted by the Centre for Research in the Arts, Social Sciences and Humanities (CRASSH), Cambridge. The editors wish to acknowledge the contribution of all participants and attendees, including Simon Goldhill, Jeremy Morris, Scott Mandelbrote, Janet Soskice, Michael Ledger-Lomas, Alison Knight, Theodor Dunkelgrün, Kate Nichols, Alex Bremner, Halvor Moxnes, Robert D. Priest, Rana Issa, Richa Dwor, Julius Lipner, Andrew Preston, Emma Hunter, Hephzibah Israel, and the late Anthony D. Smith. They would also like, belatedly, to thank the administrative staff at CRASSH for making the practicalities of putting together an event feel so straightforward.

The resulting book is all the more coherent for the painstaking comments and suggestions of two anonymous readers, while its rapid and painless acceleration into print is thanks to the efficiency and attention of Emma Brennan, Alun Richards and the staff of Manchester University Press. Chapter 3 includes material previously published in Gareth Atkins, ‘“Isaiah’s Call to England”: Doubts about Prophecy in Nineteenth-Century Britain’, Studies in Church History, 52 (2016). This material is republished with the permission of the editors of Studies in Church History. Chapter 9 includes material previously published in Stephen R. Haynes, ‘Distinction and Dispersal: Folk Theology and the Maintenance of White Supremacy’, Journal of Southern Religion, 7 (2015). This material is republished with the permission of the Association for the Study of Southern Religion.

The research leading to this volume received funding from the European Research Council under the European Union’s Seventh Framework Programme (FP7/2007-2013)/ERC grant agreement no. 295463.
