My thanks to Denise Charlton and Moninne Griffith who initially invited me to write the history of the campaign for marriage equality in Ireland. This book is ultimately their idea. My thanks to all those who worked towards the momentous victory of achieving civil marriage for same-sex couples in Ireland. Most especially thank you to Gráinne Healy, Andrew Hyland, Katherine Zappone and Ann Louise Gilligan who all took time out of their busy schedules to talk to me and help me piece together this history. Thank you also for an establishment fund granted from Yes Equality to ensure that this project was completed.

A sincere thank you to those people who kindly granted me copyright permission to publish large sections, or in some cases complete versions, of their related writings or speeches during and after the marriage equality referendum: Rory O'Neill (Panti Bliss) for permission to publish his Noble Call speech at the Abbey Theatre; Ursula Halligan for permission to republish her article 'Referendum led me to tell truth about myself,' originally published in the Irish Times; Archbishop Eamon Martin, Archbishop of Armagh, Apostolic Administrator of Dromore and Primate of All Ireland, for permission to republish his message on the marriage referendum, 'Care for the covenant of marriage'. I am grateful also to have been awarded a Moore Institute Visiting Fellowship at the National University of Ireland Galway in 2019 which gave me access to a wealth of archival and library resources to complete the final stages of writing this book. Many thanks to my colleague Liam McIlvanney for his unwavering support of my research and to Emer Lyons for compiling the index to this book and for her general positive impact on Irish Studies at the University of Otago.

As always thank you to my family and friends who never fail to support and encourage my work, especially Charlotte Hall Tiernan for proof reading the final manuscript in such fine detail. Finally, thank you to Ivana Bacik, who played an intrinsic role in the marriage equality campaign in Ireland from the earliest stages, for endorsing this book by writing the foreword.
