The authors would like to acknowledge the heroic patience shown by our contributors, whose work was first aired in 2017 and 2018, in two separate conferences held at TCD and at UCD respectively. It has taken a longer period of time than we could ever have envisaged to bring their important work to publication and they have shown extraordinary patience and fortitude along the way.

We would like to acknowledge the help and guidance of several people, but most especially that given to both of us by David Dickson, whose sound advice and kindness have helped us both over recent years. We are indebted to Holly Ritchie, whose work on the first round of edits greatly helped both of us to bring quite a large manuscript into some sort of order. At Manchester we were ably guided through the publication cycle by Emma Brennan, Meredith Carroll, Paul Clarke, Robert Whitlock and Helen Flitton, and we thank Alan Lester for his work in the background as a series editor.

Our colleagues and students at UCD and TCD have supported this project with enthusiasm and no little forbearance. We thank Anne Fuchs at the UCD Humanities Institute and the team at Trinity Long Room Hub for hosting the events that inspired the book. We owe a debt to the wider community of scholars from whose work we have learned so much. Ciaran would like to thank his family, Maija, Orla and Alva. Finola thanks Neil, Aoibh, Ruth, Toby, Ivan and Philip.
