I am grateful to the great many people who helped me with ideas and sources over the course of writing this book. The introduction benefitted from detailed revisions suggested by Vickie Cooper who has supported me with both the warmest loving support and the coldest intellectual criticism throughout the writing of the book. Thank you x.

Lara Montesinos Coleman made a number of incisive modifications on an early version of the manuscript. Chapter 2 was read by Rob Knox, and chapter 3 by Steve Tombs, both of whom provided invaluable suggestions. Tom Dark, commissioning editor at Manchester University Press, diligently pored over the manuscript and used his impressively sharp editorial skills to revise and reshape the text. He was also instrumental in molding the project from the beginning of the process to the end.

People I have written with in recent years who helped me to hone the ideas contained in this book include: Jose Atilas, Ignasi Bernat, Stéfanie Khoury, Anne Alvesalo-Kuusi and my long-standing collaborator

Steve Tombs, who may recognise some phrases herein that may or may not have been ripped-off from him. I am grateful to Polly Higgins, who did so much work in rehabilitating the concept of ecocide before her tragic death in 2019. I also acknowledge a great debt to everyone who has been involved in the discussions, debates and conversations that shaped the arguments developed in this book. They include: Grietja Baars, Joel Benjamin, Monish Bhatia, Steve Bittle, Jon Burnett, Pablo Ciocchini, Ben Crawford, Keith Ewing, Kevin Farnsworth, Alejandro Forero, Harry Glasbeek, Fiona Haines, Paddy Ireland, Dani Jiménez, Ciara Kierans, Cad Jones, Liisa Lähteenmäki, Hanna Malik, Russell Mokhiber, Andrew Moretta, Hilda Palmer, Frank Pearce, Gustavo Rojas-Páez, Vicki Sentas, Laureen Snider, Susanne Soederberg, Viviana Tacha, Richard Whittell, Jess Whyte, Jörg Wiegratz and the Socialist Register collective.

Thanks to all of the universities and other organisations that gave me the space to test out my ideas along the way. They include: the School of Social and Political Sciences, University of York; the Department of Criminology, Birkbeck; the Universidad de Castilla-La Mancha; the University of Barcelona; the International Institute for the Sociology of Law, Oñati; the University of Turku; the School of African and Oriental Studies Law School; the University of Bristol Law School; RMIT Melbourne; the Research Committee for the Sociology of Law; the European Group for the Study of Deviance and Social Control; Corporate Watch; and the CUP Escola D'estiu, Catalonia. The work in this book was supported by a Leverhulme Trust Major Research Fellowship (MRF-2016-091).

The great socio-legal scholar, W.G. (Kit) Carson, died as this book went to press. I discussed some of the ideas in chapters 2 and 3 with him in March 2019, the last time I saw him. Kit Carson had a profound influence on the approach adopted here, much more than I could ever acknowledge. The book is dedicated to him. Thanks, Kit.
