Notes on contributors

Ben Cohen is a writer and media strategist based in New York City. His essays and articles on politics and international affairs have been published by The Wall Street Journal, Commentary, Haaretz, Tablet Magazine, The Tower Magazine, Fathom and many other outlets. Cohen also writes a weekly syndicated column on Jewish affairs. During his undergraduate degree at the University of Manchester, he studied with Norman Geras.

Eve Garrard is an Honorary Research Fellow in the Department of Philosophy at the University of Manchester. Her main research interests are in moral theory and bioethics, and in philosophical issues related to the Holocaust. Before joining Manchester she lectured at Keele University, and worked for several years for the Open University. She has a special interest in teaching philosophy to beginning students. She has published various papers on the nature of evil and of forgiveness, and co-edited Moral Philosophy and the Holocaust (Ashgate, 2002) with Geoffrey Scarre. She co-authored, with David McNaughton, Forgiveness (Acumen, 2010). She also co-edited, with Stephen de Wijze, the festschrift for Norman Geras, Thinking Towards Humanity (Manchester University Press, 2012). She has published on antisemitism in the online journal Fathom (see 'The Pleasures of Antisemitism', Fathom, Summer 2013, and 'Anti-Zionism, Anti-Judaism, Anti-Semitism' in Fathom, Winter 2015). She is currently working on further papers on forgiveness and evil.

Terry Glavin has worked as a reporter, columnist and editor for a variety of newspapers and is presently a columnist with the National Post and the Ottawa Citizen. His assignments in recent years have taken him to Afghanistan, Israel, the Russian Far East, the Eastern Himalayas, Iraq, Syria, Turkey, Jordan, Geneva, China and Central America. He is the author of seven books and the co-author of three. His books have been published in Canada, Germany, the United States and the United Kingdom. He has won more than a dozen literary and journalism awards. Glavin's most recent book is Come from the Shadows: The Long and Lonely Struggle for Peace in Afghanistan.

Alan Johnson is the editor of the journal Fathom: for a Deeper Understanding of Israel and the Region. He was a professor of democratic theory and practice at Edge Hill University before joining the Britain Israel Communications and Research Centre (BICOM), an independent research centre, in 2011 as Senior Research Fellow. He founded and edited Democratiya, a free online journal of international politics from 2005 until its incorporation in 2009 into Dissent magazine, where he served on the editorial board. He was a co-author of the 2006 'Euston Manifesto', a modern statement of social democratic anti-totalitarianism, and in 2007 he edited Global Politics after 9/11: The Democratiya Interviews. His essays on Rosa Luxemburg, Hal Draper, Etienne Balibar, Richard Rorty, Slavoj Žižek, and other left-wing thinkers have appeared in Radical Philosophy, Historical Materialism, Dissent, New Politics, Jacobin and many other academic and non-academic journals.