Acknowledgements

The process of researching, writing and publishing this book spans seven years and there are many people, funders and institutions that helped me along the way. Firstly, I must thank all the people who participated in my research projects that inform this book. Particularly I would like to thank the WWF representatives, Arctic state and Permanent Participant representatives to the Arctic Council and all other interviewees, including Greenpeace representatives, Halldór Jóhannsson, Warren Bernauer, Mayor Jerry Natanine, academics/researchers and Indigenous community leaders. Their involvement is invaluable for my research and this book would not have been possible without the willingness to share their insights and experiences with me.

Secondly, I would like to acknowledge and thank my funders. The majority of the research was completed while I was funded by a European Union’s Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme under the Marie Skłodowska-Curie grant agreement No. 746312 (2018–20). Additional research came from an earlier project funded by the Carlsberg Foundation in which I received a Distinguished Postdoctoral Research Fellowship (Project Number: CF15–0434) (2016–18). The Carlsberg project laid the foundation for inspiration and success of the subsequent Marie Curie project research. Lastly, supplementary research from the Centre for Newfoundland Studies, Memorial University of Newfoundland came from research undertaken while a Fellow of the J. R. Smallwood Foundation (2020–22) on the legacy of the anti-sealing movement from the 1960s to 1980s on the peoples of the Canadian Province of Newfoundland and Labrador. The Centre for Newfoundland Studies research helps to contextualize the legacy of environmental and animal rights organizations, including WWF, in the Circumpolar North.
Acknowledgements

I also owe a debt of gratitude to my institution, University of Southern Denmark (SDU), and colleagues at the Department of Political Science and Public Management who supported me throughout my research projects and the process of writing this book. In particular, I thank Tina Guldbrandt Jakobsen, Morten Kallestrup, Signe Pihl-Thingvad, Bess Egede Rogers, Ann Skovly, Anette Schmidt, Arne Bækdal Hansen, Rasmus Reimer Ejsing, Kurt Klaudi Klausen, Klaus Petersen, Arjen van Dalen and Romana Careja. Additionally, many thanks to my colleagues at the Center for War Studies, SDU, especially Vincent Keating, Pål Røren, Amelie Theussen, Sten Rynning, Chiara de Franco, Peter Viggo Jakobsen, Tanja Marie Hansen, Trine Flockhart, Vicky Karyoti, Olivier Schmitt and many others past and present.

Furthermore, the Marie Curie project underpinning much of this book’s research was hosted for a secondment at Keele University from March to September 2018. Special thanks to David Scrivener and Brian Doherty for all their guidance, feedback and support while in Keele, UK, with particular thanks to Teale N. Phelps Bondaroff who worked tirelessly with me while at Keele to write ‘Becoming an Arctic Council NGO observer’, published in the Polar Record journal – an article that helped inspire the conceptualization of this book. Thank you, as well, to colleague André Saramago.

Special thanks to Ulrik Pram Gad, founder of the Arctic Seminar Series based in Copenhagen, Denmark jointly at the University of Copenhagen and Aalborg University, for the opportunity to present early chapters of this book and receive vital feedback from polar scholars from the Kingdom of Denmark. This feedback enabled me to strengthen my book’s focus and approach, which ultimately helped me to obtain the publishing contract.

Additionally many thanks to Colleen Field, archivist at the Centre for Newfoundland Studies, and to her colleagues for their help with archival data collection at the Centre, and to Nicole Holloway of the Ferriss Hodgett Library, Grenfell Campus, Memorial University of Newfoundland for her library assistance. Together Colleen and her colleagues and Nicole were of tremendous help navigating restrictions in place in 2020 at the time of the completion of this book due to the COVID-19 pandemic and global, national and province lockdown restrictions and travel impediments. The research at the Centre and access to Memorial’s library resources would not have been possible without their help.
Acknowledgements

Lastly, a special thanks to my family. Their support and love helped me throughout the process of researching, writing and publishing the book, especially as I navigated the challenges of remote researching and working during the COVID-19 pandemic.