Contributors

Andrew Bennett is Professor of English at the University of Bristol. He is editor of The Cambridge Companion to Kazuo Ishiguro (Cambridge University Press, 2023) and co-author, with Nicholas Royle, of An Introduction to Literature, Criticism and Theory (Routledge, 6th edn, 2023) and This Thing Called Literature: Reading, Thinking, Writing (Routledge, 2015). His other books include Suicide Century: Literature and Suicide from James Joyce to David Foster Wallace (Cambridge University Press, 2017), Ignorance: Literature and Agnoiology (Manchester University Press, 2009), and The Author (Routledge, 2005).

Robert Eaglestone is Professor of Contemporary Literature and Thought at Royal Holloway, University of London. He works on contemporary literature and philosophy. He is the author of eight books including The Broken Voice: Reading Post-Holocaust Literature (Oxford University Press, 2017) and Truth and Wonder: A Literary Introduction to Plato and Aristotle (Routledge, 2022) and the editor or co-editor of ten more, including The Routledge Companion to Twenty First Century Literary Fiction (Routledge, 2018). His work has been translated into seven languages. He co-founded the British Association for Contemporary Literary Studies.

Emily Horton is a Senior Lecturer in English Literature at Brunel University. Her research interests include contemporary world literature, popular fiction and fictional explorations of trauma and affect. Her first monograph, Contemporary Crisis Fictions, was published with Palgrave Macmillan in 2014. She has also co-edited two volumes: The 1980s: A Decade in Contemporary British Fiction, with Philip Tew and Leigh Wilson (Continuum, 2014); and Ali Smith, with Monica Germanà (Continuum, 2013).
Rebecca Karni is a Lecturer in the Department of Literary Arts and Studies at the Rhode Island School of Design. Her research interests are in twentieth- and twenty-first-century global Anglophone, world, British, American, Asian British and Asian American, and Japanese literatures; the novel and narrative theory; global film; aesthetics and ethics; and translation studies. Her publications include articles on Kazuo Ishiguro, among them ‘Made in Translation: Language, “Japaneseness”, “Englishness”, and “Global Culture” in Ishiguro’ in Comparative Literature Studies, and a chapter in the forthcoming Cambridge Companion to Kazuo Ishiguro.

Bruce Robbins is Old Dominion Foundation Professor in the Humanities at Columbia University. He previously taught at the universities of Geneva and Lausanne as well as Rutgers University. His most recent books are Criticism and Politics: A Polemical Introduction (Stanford University Press, 2022), The Beneficiary (Duke University Press, 2017) and Cosmopolitanisms, co-edited with Paulo Horta (New York University Press, 2017). He is the director of two documentaries, “Some of My Best Friends Are Zionists” and “What Kind of Jew Is Shlomo Sand?”

Kristian Shaw is Associate Professor in English Literature at the University of Lincoln. He is the author of Cosmopolitanism in Twenty-First Century Fiction (Palgrave, 2017) and Brexlit: British Literature and the European Project (Bloomsbury, 2021). He is the co-editor of Hari Kunzru: Twenty-First Century Perspectives (Manchester University Press, 2022).

Anni Shen is an associate professor of English currently teaching at the College of Foreign Languages and Cultures, Xiamen University. She has a PhD in English from Peking University and has worked as a postdoctoral fellow at Yale University affiliated with the Department of Comparative Literature and the Department of Film and Media Studies. Her first monograph in Chinese, Transmedia Aesthetic Modernity: Kazuo Ishiguro’s Three Novels in Relation to Film, was published by China Social Sciences Press in 2020. Her essays have appeared in Adaptation and CLIO, and another is forthcoming in Critique: Studies in Contemporary Fiction.

Peter Sloane is Senior Lecturer in English at the University of Buckingham. He is the author of David Foster Wallace and the Body (Routledge, 2019) and Kazuo Ishiguro’s Gestural Poetics.
Contributors

Yugin Teo is Senior Lecturer in Communications & English at Bournemouth University. He has previously taught literature and film at the University of Brighton and the University of Sussex where he completed his doctorate. His research on the representation of memory in literature and film has been published in the journals Critique, Medical Humanities and Science Fiction Film and Television. His research monograph Kazuo Ishiguro and Memory was published by Palgrave Macmillan in 2014.

Sara Upstone is Professor of Contemporary Literature and Faculty Director of Postgraduate Research at Kingston School of Art, Kingston University. Her publications include Rethinking Race and Identity in Contemporary British Fiction (Routledge, 2017), British Asian Fiction: Twenty-First-Century Voices (Manchester University Press, 2011) and Spatial Politics in the Postcolonial Novel (Ashgate, 2010). She is the co-editor of Postmodern Literature and Race (Cambridge University Press, 2015), Researching and Representing Mobilities: Transdisciplinary Encounters (Palgrave, 2014), Postcolonial Spaces: The Politics of Place in Contemporary Culture (Palgrave, 2011) and (with Peter Ely) the forthcoming Community in Contemporary British Fiction (Bloomsbury, 2022).

Cynthia F. Wong is Professor in the Department of English at the University of Colorado, Denver, where she teaches modern and contemporary world literature. She is author of Writers and Their Work: Kazuo Ishiguro (3rd edn, Northcote House, 2019), co-editor with Brian Shaffer of Conversations with Kazuo Ishiguro (University Press of Mississippi, 2008) and with Hülya Yıldız of Kazuo Ishiguro in a Global Context (Routledge, 2015). She has published essays on Asian American authors Jhumpa Lahiri, Karen Tei Yamashita, Joy Kogawa and Julie Otsuka.