Acknowledgements

This book draws on material from an ESRC-funded research project that was initially conceived back in 2009. Over the course of the five years in which we have since worked on this project we have benefitted hugely from the help and assistance of a large number of individuals. We would like to take a moment here to acknowledge these and offer our sincere apologies to anyone we have omitted.

Firstly, we are particularly grateful to all of those people and organisations that arranged, hosted or participated in our focus groups. These included the African Community Centre in Swansea, Facilitators for a Better Jamaica in London and the Workers' Educational Association in Llanelli, all of whom organised facilities as well as helping to recruit participants for our research. We are also deeply grateful to Parveen Akhtar, Justin Gest, Gauri Kaskbekar-Shah, Miriam Smith, Rukhsana Bibi, Alison Crotch-Harvey and Marie Wiswell for their time and help with this research.

In the process of working on ideas in this book, we have also benefitted from the advice, comments, feedback and other help of a large number of academics whom we gratefully acknowledge. Drafts of material contained here were presented at conferences, including events organised by the International Studies Association and the Political Studies Association, as well as in departmental events at Oxford Brookes University, Swansea University and the University of East Anglia. Our thanks go to our colleagues and friends in our current and former departments and to Richard Jackson, Matt McDonald, Ben O'Loughlin, Basia Spalek and all those who attended our dissemination events in Swansea and London. Sections of the book were written during a sabbatical at the Department of Political Science in Copenhagen, for which we thank Lars Bo Kaspersen. We also gratefully acknowledge the Economic and Social Research Council for providing the funding for our research (RES 000-22-3765). At Manchester University Press we are indebted to Anthony Mason for his interest in and enthusiasm for the project, as well as for the patience he showed us throughout the writing of this book.

Some of the material contained in Chapter 4 was originally published under Jarvis, L. and Lister, M. (2013a) 'Disconnected Citizenship? The Impacts of Anti-Terrorism Policy on Citizenship in the UK', Political Studies 61(3): 656–675 and Lister, M. and Jarvis, L. (2013) 'Disconnection and Resistance: Anti-Terrorism and Citizenship in the UK', Citizenship Studies 17(6–7): 727–740. Chapter 5 also contains material previously published under Jarvis, L. and Lister, M. (2013) 'Vernacular Securities and their Study: A Qualitative Analysis and Future Research Agenda', International Relations 27(2): 157–178. We gratefully acknowledge Wiley, Taylor and Francis, and Sage respectively for permission to reuse this material.

Finally, it is only appropriate that we thank our families and friends for all of the time, help and support they have given us in the course of this research. This book was written at a particularly eventful time in our personal lives, and we simply could not have completed it without the support of our partners, Tamsin Barber and Aya Oyama. We hope, too, that our parents, siblings and friends know how grateful we are all for their encouragement over the years: thank you.
