LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS

Robert Burroughs is Senior Lecturer in English Literature at Leeds Beckett University. He is the author of a number of works on empire, humanitarianism and Africa in the nineteenth century, including Travel Writing and Atrocities (New York: Routledge, 2011).

Emma Christopher is on the faculty at the University of Technology, Sydney, and is in charge of research for Anti-Slavery Australia. Her works include A Merciless Place: The Fate of Britain's Convicts after the American Revolution (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2011) and Slave Ship Sailors and their Captive Cargoes, 1760–1807 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2006).

Richard Huzzey is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of Liverpool and Co-Director of the Centre for the Study of International Slavery, a joint research initiative of his university and the International Slavery Museum. He is the author of Freedom Burning: Anti-Slavery and Empire in Victorian Britain (Ithaca: Cornell University Press, 2012) and a series of articles in scholarly journals.

David Lambert is Reader in History at the University of Warwick and former Director of the Yesu Persaud Centre for Caribbean Studies. He is the author of Mastering the Niger: James MacQueen's African Geography and the Struggle over Atlantic Slavery (Chicago: Chicago University Press, 2013), White Creole Culture, Politics and Identity during the Age of Abolition (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2005), and a wide variety of other works.

John McAleer is Lecturer in History at the University of Southampton. For six years, he was Curator of Imperial and Maritime History at the National Maritime Museum, Greenwich. He is the author of Representing Africa: Landscape, Exploration and Empire in Southern Africa, 1780–1870 (Manchester: Manchester University Press, 2010) and (with H. V. Bowen and Robert J. Blyth) Monsoon Traders: The Maritime World of the East India Company (London: Scala, 2011).

John Rankin is Assistant Professor in the Department of History at East Tennessee State University. His interests lie in the overlapping themes of imperialism, transnational and global studies, issues of race and racism and the social history of medicine. His forthcoming monograph (University of Missouri Press) examines the intersection of health, race and empire in British West Africa, 1800–60.

Mary Wills completed her thesis 'The Royal Navy and the suppression of the Atlantic slave trade: anti-slavery, empire and identity' in 2012, following an AHRC collaborative doctoral award held at the University of Hull's Wilberforce Institute for the Study of Slavery and Emancipation and the National Maritime Museum.