Notes on contributors

Kirsteen Macpherson Bardell is Lecturer in History at the University of Wolverhampton and the University of Nottingham and is also a holistic therapist. Her Ph.D. thesis, “‘Death by divelische demonstracion’: witchcraft beliefs, gender and popular religion in the early modern midlands and north of England’ (Nottingham Trent University, 1999) focused on popular witchcraft beliefs in early modern England.

Alison Findlay is Senior Lecturer in English at Lancaster University. She has written extensively on women in Renaissance drama and on Shakespeare. Her publications include Illegitimate Power: Bastards in Renaissance Drama (1994), A Feminist Perspective on Renaissance Drama (1998) and (as co-author) Women and Dramatic Production 1550–1700 (2000). She is co-director of a practical research project on early modern women’s drama, and an editor of the Lancastrian Shakespeare volumes (2003).

Marion Gibson is Lecturer in English at Exeter University and Truro College, Cornwall. Her research interests include Renaissance literature, biography, and British and American representations of the supernatural, including on film. She is the author of Reading Witchcraft: Stories of Early English Witches (1999) and Early Modern Witches: Witchcraft Cases in Contemporary Writing (2000).

Jonathan Lumby read Theology at Cambridge and subsequently studied at both Oxford and London universities. He has taught in Zimbabwe and England, is a former Vicar of Gisburn, and is now Rector of Ecclestone, Chester. He is the author of The Lancashire Witch-Craze: Jennet Preston and the Lancashire Witches (1995).

Michael Mullett is Professor of Cultural and Religious History at the University of Lancaster, where he has taught for over thirty years, his current teaching concerns being popular culture and popular protest, the history of the Jews in Europe, and Luther and the European Reformation. His most recent books are John Bunyan in Context (1996), Catholics in Britain and Ireland, 1558–1829 (1998) and The Catholic Reformation (1999). He is currently working on a life of Martin Luther.

Joanne Pearson is Lecturer at the Department of Religious and Theological Studies, Cardiff University. She is the author of A Popular Dictionary of Paganism (2002), and of Wicca: Magic, Spirituality and the ‘Mystic Other’ (2003), a revised version of her Lancaster University Ph.D. thesis. She was the organiser of a 1996 conference on modern paganism at Lancaster University, whose papers were published as Nature Religion Today (1998).

Robert Poole is Reader in History at St Martin’s College, Lancaster, where he teaches early modern and modern British history, and was the organiser of the 1999 weekend conference on ‘The Lancashire Witches: History, Heritage and Representation 1612–1999’ which gave rise to this book. His publications include Time’s Alteration: Calendar Reform in Early Modern England (1998) and The Diaries of Samuel Bamford (with Martin Hewitt) (2000).

Stephen Pumfrey is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of Lancaster. He has written on the history of science and ideas in early modern England, editing and contributing to Science, Culture and Popular Belief in Renaissance Europe (1991). His book Latitude and the Magnetic Earth was published in 2002.

Jeffrey Richards is Professor of Cultural History at the University of Lancaster and has written and broadcast extensively on both medieval history and nineteenth- and twentieth-century cultural history. He is the author of a number of books, including The Popes and the Papacy in the Early Middle Ages (1979), Sex, Dissidence and Damnation (1991) and Imperialism and Music (2001).

James Sharpe is Professor of History at York University. He has written extensively on the social history of early modern England, particularly crime and witchcraft. His publications include Early Modern England: A Social History 1550–1750 (1987), Instruments of Darkness: Witchcraft in England 1550–1750 (1996), The Bewitching of Anne Gunther: A Horrible and True Story of Football, Witchcraft, Murder, and the King of England (1999) and Witchcraft in Early Modern England (2001).

John Swain teaches history at Nottingham High School. He is author of ‘The Lancashire witch trials of 1612 and 1634 and the economics of witchcraft’ (Northern History, 1994), Industry Before the Industrial Revolution: North-East Lancashire c. 1500–1640 (1986) and ‘Capital formation by clothiers in north-east Lancashire c. 1550–1640’ (Northern History, 1997).

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Richard Wilson is Professor of Renaissance Studies at the University of Lancaster and Visiting Professor of Shakespeare Studies at the Sorbonne University (Paris III). He was co-organiser of the 1999 Lancastrian Shakespeare conference and is Academic Adviser to the planned Hoghton Tower Shakespeare Centre. He has edited volumes on New Historicism and Renaissance Drama (1993), Christopher Marlowe (1999), Julius Caesar (2001) and Lancastrian Shakespeare (2003). His publications include Will Power: Essays on Shakespearean Authority (1993) and Secret Shakespeare (2003).