Acknowledgements

Towards the end of The Woman Warrior, Maxine Hong Kingston remarks that 'the beginning is hers, the ending mine'. It is with this conception of creative continuity in mind that I wish to thank Maxine Hong Kingston for her generosity in answering my questions during the writing of this book, and her graciousness when we met in London in October, 2003. I also wish to thank Professor Deborah Madsen and Professor A. Robert Lee for their generous help in defining this project in its early stages. The Bancroft Library, at the University of California, Berkeley, hosted me during April, 2005, when I consulted the Maxine Hong Kingston Papers, for which I am grateful. I would like to acknowledge the University of Wales, Aberystwyth, who awarded me a sabbatical in early 2005 to write this book. The Arts and Humanities Research Council gave me an award in 2005 which enabled completion of the project, which I acknowledge with gratitude. The University of Wales, Aberystwyth, University Research Fund awarded me a grant to visit Berkeley during Easter of 2005, and I acknowledge this assistance with gratitude. Professor John Thieme, Editor of the Contemporary World Writers Series, has been generous with his guidance and comments during various stages of writing this book, and I am very grateful to him. Matthew Frost gave me the opportunity to work with MUP again, and I would like to thank him. Dr Will Slocombe helped me to compile the Select Bibliography in this book, and I acknowledge his impeccable work with thanks.

On a personal note, I would like to mention my wonderful friends Kim, Elizabeth, Janet, Sera, Llinos and Jenny, who have all patiently let me rehearse my ideas, and bore each of them with my progress, over the last two years. I must also thank my husband Tim, for his endless patience, his astute and sensitively delivered commentary on my writing, lots of emergency childcare, too much chardonnay and many computer rescue missions over the last couple of years, and more. I owe you! Also, my dear daughter Mary, for her irreverent questions and for exhorting me to finish my homework early. Finally, this book is dedicated to my wonderful youngest daughter Madeleine, whose birth in February, 2003, was a joyful interruption to its progress.
