I begin by particularly thanking those individuals whose practical help, support and belief in this project allowed it to develop and come to fruition. I am especially grateful to Professor William Hughes, Dr Tracy Brain and Dr Colin Edwards of Bath Spa University and Professor Victor Sage and Professor Roger Sales of the University of East Anglia. Special thanks are also due to Iris Selwood (Mum), Aaron, Kelly and Joe Mason, Andrew Selwood (sculptor extraordinaire) and family, Karen, Nick and Jenny Baxter, and Paul Withers (Patron of the Arts) for services too numerous to mention. I would also offer my thanks to Professor Tim Middleton, Professor Neil Sammells, Dr Tracey Hill, Dr Paul Davies, Richard Kerridge and Alison Dagger at Bath Spa University, to Pam Golding and her colleagues in the English Department at New College, Swindon, and to Dave Lamb at Swindon College. For their individual assistance and encouragement throughout this project I would like to thank Dr Lesley Hall (Wellcome Institute), Dr Colin Buckle (Leeds Metropolitan University), Dr Ivan Crozier (Edinburgh), Professor Terry Hale (University of Hull), Dr Nick Freeman (Loughborough University), Dr Marie Mulvey-Roberts (UWE), Dr Graham Ford (University of Teeside) and Professor Andrew Smith (University of Glamorgan).

I have also enjoyed the support of a multitude of friends and family as the adventure of this project has unfolded. These include Dr Piers Stephens (Lyman Briggs School of Science, Michigan State University), Dani Hilary, Judith Cowie, Jane Colenso, Dr Roberta Anderson (BSU), Dr Steve Hunt (UWE), Dr Stephen ‘Kit’ Carver (Norwich School of Art), Dr Linda Jones (University of Reading) and many others near and far; you know who you are, and I think of you all with the utmost affection and gratitude. I also acknowledge the assistance of Maggie Collins and all in the library at Bath Spa University and the librarians of the Bodleian Library and Radcliffe Science Libraries (Oxford) and of the Cambridge University Library.

The research for my PhD dissertation, on which this book is based, was funded through a three-year Studentship granted by the Arts and Humanities Research Board, which was supplemented with practical help from the Faculty of Humanities and its successor, the School of English and Creative Studies, at Bath Spa University. The assistance of all three bodies is greatly acknowledged.

And last, but by no means least, I would like to thank the canine companions who have accompanied me through the mad and glad process of writing this book: Gyp (a prince among lurchers) and much-loved mongrel, William (the three-legged wonder), who has recently passed away – you are already sadly missed.
