Acknowledgements

I am grateful to the Berlin Graduate School of Social Sciences at Humboldt University for providing me with an academic ‘home’ while I was writing my PhD thesis on which this book is based. In particular, I would like to thank my supervisors, Professor Herfried Münkler and Professor Klaus Eder, who generously offered their time and expertise to discuss my work with me.

During the time of my Ph.D. research, I benefited immensely from a Marie Curie Pre-doctoral Fellowship hosted by the European Research Institute at Birmingham University. I am grateful to Professor Thomas Diez, who supervised my research during that time and continued to be a source of advice and encouragement after that.

I would like to thank friends and colleagues who discussed my research with me, read various drafts and chapters of the thesis, and, most importantly, endured me during the alternating fits of euphoria and frustration that typically accompany the process of writing a Ph.D. Heiko Fritz, Bettina Renz and Daniela Sicurelli were particularly indispensable in this regard.

Also indispensable during my Ph.D. research were the scholarships I received from the Land Berlin (NAFöG) and from the European Commission/FP 6 (Marie Curie), and the travel funds provided by the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD).

Finally, I would like to thank my family, without whose unfailing support and encouragement this project – like so many others – would not have been possible.
